Letters to the editor are welcome. While there is no limit on the number of words, please write only enough material to adequately cover the subject. Anonymous letters are not acceptable, although names may be withheld on request.

Dear Editor:

In answer to the article on the traffic problem in Carmel, may I offer a few additional suggestions? Why not build parking facilities in the Rancho shopping center? Inaugurate a tram service running every 15 or 20 minutes and charging a reasonable fee.

Close off the streets between Junipero and Scenic and 7th and 6th to all car traffic and make Ocean Avenue a mall, serviced only by the tram. I feel this would preserve the charm of Carmel and still provide shoppers with a means of transportation.

Dear Editor:

Why hasn't a transportation needs survey been taken to determine how many people would be willing to pay $10 per year for unlimited bus service?

The bus service in Santa Cruz went from the red to the black by obtaining the support of those who need and use the buses.

Frequent bus service should be provided for Monterey Peninsula College, Alvarado Street, Del Monte Shopping Center and to county offices on Aguajito, to and from Carmel, Pacific Grove, Seaside, Marin and Fort Ord.

There should be service, at least a few times a day, from Carmel Valley Village to the mouth of the valley, and from there through Carmel, from one end to the other. The lovely Pacific Grove coastline should be more assessible, and no doubt Del Monte Avenue needs service. And don't forget Cannery Row!

The fleet of Volkswagon mini-buses run by Young Adults for action suggested by the Seaside City Council sounds like an excellent solution to the transportation problem.

The VW's would be far cheaper to run, much less polluting of the atmosphere, more flexible and faster than the big, lumbering buses.

Peninsula newspapers could render an invaluable service to their readers by providing a form to send in for stating how many in each family would support unlimited bus service at a yearly rate and where they need the buses to take them most frequently.

Dear Editor:

I wish to commend Jorune Jonikas for a very fine journalistic account of our plant as appeared in the Pine Cone of May 3.

The technical aspects of this plant are very difficult to present to the public as well as she has done.

Dear Editor:

It is disappointing that the city council has chosen to revive the second kitchen issue. The council apparently has no more weightier matters to consider than whether a handful of second kitchens -- 13 to be exact -- would "destroy" the residential character of Carmel.

In my view, it would be discriminatory for the city to move against non-conforming second kitchens without at the same time moving against non-conforming hotels, motels and rooming houses in the same residential area.

A second kitchen is at least hidden from view, and poses no visual detriment. But it is hard to see how a hotel, motel or rooming house could be held to be an enhancement of the city's residential character.

So if the council is going to move against non-conforming second kitchens, it must also go all the way and declare illegal hotels, motels and rooming houses in the residential area.

"Hope is the enemy of all mankind. It furrows the brow and wrinkles the face. A man's face is placid and kind and relaxed only when he is deep in sleep. That is because he is no longer hoping." (Pine Cone, March 7, 1963)

The mayor's report

By BERNARD ANDERSON

THE GASOLINE shortage is something that we have been hearing about and talking about for the past few months, but suddenly it begins to become reality and it shocks us that it sneaked up on us so quietly. We have been warned, but somehow we kept thinking that the omnipotent powers-that-be in Washington would somehow take care of everything for us. It can't happen here -- but it has.

Individually, it will affect us in varying degrees. We will have to think about consolidating our trips to the store, to the cleaners, to run the many and various errands we find a necessary part of our lives.

We will have to think twice before we embark on long vacation trips. After all, there may not be gasoline available when the tank runs low in the family car. But, as we did in World War II, when gasoline rationing was pretty severe, we will get by, even though it may be with some degree of personal inconvenience.

It is in the public sector that the shortage of gasoline will have much more serious effects. The city of Carmel-by-the-Sea, like most of the other cities in Monterey County, purchases all of its petroleum products under the umbrella of a county contract. We get a better price that way, or we used to. This year, it's anybody's guess what our price of gasoline will be. So far, none of the major oil companies has even indicated any interest in supplying us for the coming fiscal year, beginning July 1, 1973.

In the meantime, we have received a letter from Union Oil Co., the supplier under the county contract, that effective immediately, they will only deliver 83 percent of our needs, based on past usage. This sounds simple. All we have to do is cut back our use of gasoline by 17 percent and there's no problem. Not so.

IN GOVERNMENT, as in all other facts of life, nothing can be taken, considered and acted on all by itself. Everything affects everything else. In Carmel's case, the landfill site by Carmel River, now closed by order of the Water Quality Control Board, and the lack of a new landfill site for immediate use, have combined to create a drastic increase in our demand for gasoline. Why? Because we generate approximately six truckloads of street sweepings, brush chippings, pine needles, leaves, and other fill that would make excellent mulch if we could use it. We can't. There is no place to put it. So, instead of driving each truck a half-mile to a local fill site, we find we need to drive six trucks per day to the refuse disposal site off of Highway 1 beyond Marina. Simple arithmetic will show that this increases our demand for gasoline by thirty gallons per day -- at a time when our supply is being reduced 17 percent.

Obviously we are going to have to reorder priorities for the use of our shrinking gasoline supplies. Should we reduce the police patrols? Can we afford to reduce the fire department training and Thursday night drills? Do we stop sweeping our streets, repairing our sidewalks, patching our storm drains? Do we allow our trash and our clean fill to accumulate in our parks, or on the parking lot at Sunset Center as we once did?

One of the highest priorities is to find a place to deposit clean fill, which makes up nearly all of the six truckloads a day that are now being hauled to the district disposal site. The next step is for us to decide which of our other gasoline-consuming activities are the most important.

What do you think?

Big Sur hopes for big summer

By ROBERT MISKIMON

BIG SUR – Residents of this tourist-oriented community are looking to the summer season to help pull them out of a slump which they feel is attributable to misconceptions about the effects of winter musdlides.

The chief misconception which has hurt business, most residents seem to agree, is that highway access to their coastal community has been cut off since the series of devastating mudslides which started last October.

Highway 1 north of Big Sur has been open since shortly after the slides, while Highway 1 south of the community was opened last Friday to two-lane traffic.

The Division of Highways announced opening of a paved detour at Laffler Canyon, traversing about 500 feet of the highway which was heavily damaged by the storms and slides.

The detour has been a one-way, signal controlled, temporary road, and the Division of Highways says completion of the two-way traffic detour should remove any delays. The department plans full repair of the damaged section of roadway after Labor Day.

The evidence of the mudslides is still very apparent, especially in the Big Sur Village area, where several stores and residences are still covered with earth and boulders. But, for the bulk of the community, change and adaptation has become a way of life.

The Post Office has been moved to temporary quarters in a trailer located on U.S. Forest Service property, several miles south of the village, off Highway 1. The old Post Office, which was located at the Village Store, has been closed because the store is still buried in several feet of rock and mud.

But residents seem to like the new location better, and have gotten up a petition asking the Postal Service to locate permanently in the vicinity.

George Malone, owner of the River Inn, located on Highway 1 adjacent to the Village Store, says residents and store owners have formed the Big Sur Chamber of Commerce.

Its primary goal is to raise enough money to be able to afford to buy advertising to let the world know that Big Sur is still on the map and that its beauty hasn't been destroyed by the mud slides.

Most important, the chamber of commerce wants people to know that Big Sur is accessible by highway.

"If we had a good summer, it could put a lot of us back on our feet," Malone says.

"Business is way off. All of the businesses down the highway are really hurting. Everybody here on the coast has gone through an economic crisis.

"A lot of our suppliers have given us good consideration by extending credit," he says. "But we don't have the money to have an advertising campaign to let people know."

MALONE SAYS he is frustrated in his attempts to deal with various governmental agencies, seeking assistance in repairing drainage culverts which are designed to channel water and mud away from his store.

"The Highway Department didn't clear anything," he says, recalling that he rented some tractors after the heaviest mudslides and removed the debris personally. It took two weeks to clear the mud and rocks after the first heavy slide Oct. 14, 1972, and one week in a subsequent slide.

He feels that if someone had made the proper modifications to a nearby drainage culvert, the devastating effects of the largest slide could have been minimized, since a warning had been sounded by an earlier, smaller slide.

"Nobody seems to know anything," he concludes after writing letters to county, state and federal officials. "The state just ignored the culvert that caused the problem."

"It's a matter of where the responsibility lies -- with the state or county -- to correct the threat upon the village. So far, nobody's done anything."

Malone says the Pheneger Creek culvert, located some 200 yards south of his store, was the source of the big slides and should be improved to prevent a recurrence of the disaster.

He wrote Jan. 30 to the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District, spelling out the problem and asking for assistance. Copies of the letter were also sent to the Division of Highways, the State Department of Water Resources, Congressman Burt Talcott, and Assemblyman Bob Wood.

Although he received a reply from Loran Bunte, district engineer, Malone feels it was vague and inconclusive, and "the problem is still there, and we've heard nothing from the Division of Highways.

"I got no reply from either our Asseblyman or Congressman, nor have I seen them in the area to inspect the damage since the first slide. Everybody's just ducking the problem."

Malone, like many other Big Sur businessmen, has applied to the Small Business Administration for a low-interest loan to repair damage to his establishment, which also includes a gas station and 18 motel units.

He's asking for $400,000, which is what he figures it will cost to repair the entire water system, which has been operating at reduced capacity since the slides, and to make other repairs. His home, a trailer located on the east side of Highway 1, south of the River Inn, at the time of the slides, was moved northward and inundated in 10 feet of mud.

But the most pressing need of the community, as Malone sees it, is to get out the word that Big Sur is not a disaster area any more.

"We've had people come in here from Los Angeles who drove Route 101 to Carmel, then down on Highway 1 to Big Sur because they thought the road was closed," he says.

La Rene Neal, manager of Ripplewood Resort, says she receives a steady stream of letters from former visitors to Big Sur asking "if we still exist."

"RIPPLEWOOD HAD no direct effect from the slides, but business dropped off and has stayed low," she says. "Usually, after Easter week, it's steady. We had some people Easter, but then it just died down."

She agrees that the summer months will be crucial for Big Sur.

"Unless it changes, the summer will be really, really slow," she says. "So many people think it's still closed here. People write letters and ask if Big Sur is still in the same kind of setting. They say if it's filled with rocks and gravel, they don't want to come."

Mrs. Neal believes the Division of Highways has done "a great job" in clearing the village, and thinks the roads are in "marvelous condition."

She counts herself as one of those who like the new location of the Post Office because, she believes, it offers more convenient service.

Nunnie Whitfield, postmaster for Big Sur, was not there at the time of the slides, but says every indication he gets from residents is that they are happy with the new trailer Post Office. Immediately after the big slides, the Post Office worked out of the Point Sur Naval Facility, then moved to its present location.

Although the Post Office is advertising for bids for a permanent location, Whitfield doesn't think any move will be made for at least eight or nine months.

"The residents would rather have it here, because it's more accessible," he says.

Mary Fee, owner of Glen Oaks motel, is optimistic that business will pick up this summer, especially since the AAA has finally stopped telling motorists that Highway 1 is closed.

"They'd been doing it until recently, but we told them about it and they stopped," she says. "Business has been bad since the slides, and the rain hasn't helped much. But I think business will be better this summer."

Glen Oaks motel remained open despite the slides, but the tons of ooze destroyed water lines, and she has applied to the Small Business Administration for a $4,000 loan to replace the water lines and put in a new well.

She regrets that the slides have cut off access to the Big Sur Grange, located near Juan Higuera Creek, where much of the mud came down, loosened by heavy rains which followed an August forest fire which destroyed ground cover.

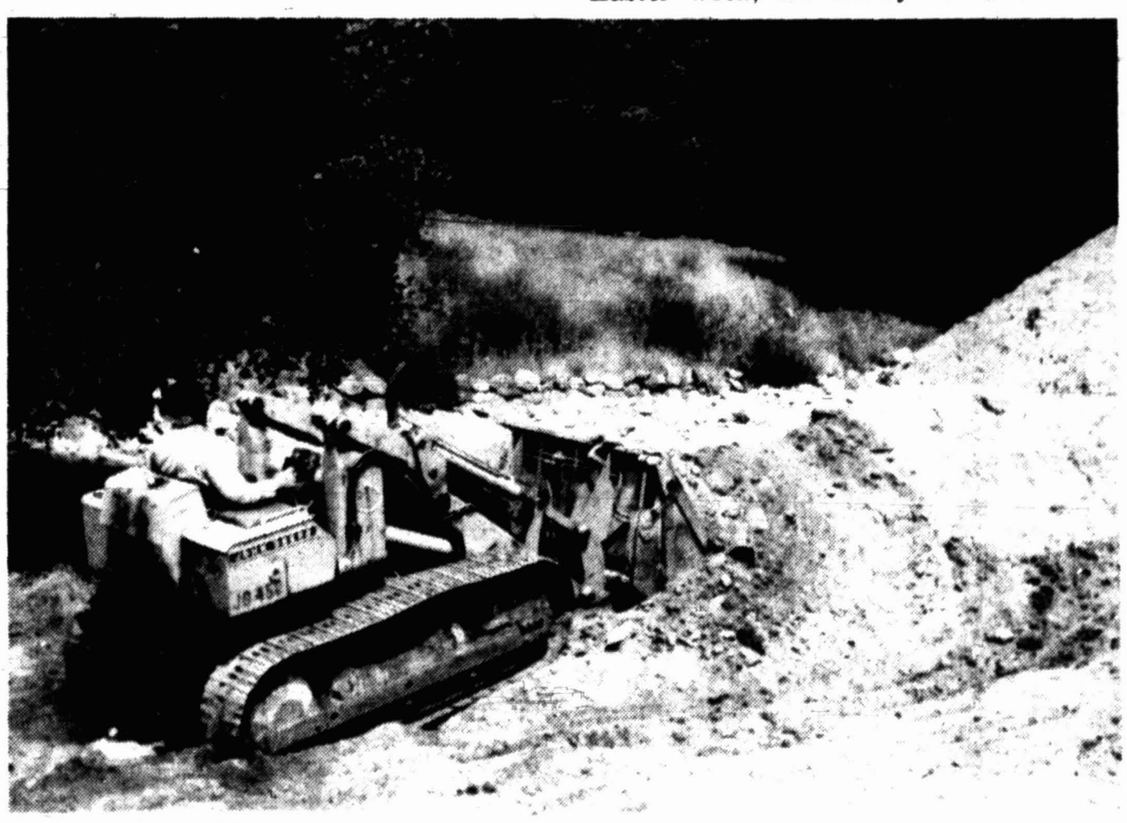
The Grange Hall, which is the only public meeting hall in Big Sur, will be accessible to residents after a new bridge is built, and public meetings have been held at Captain Cooper School and at the Big Sur Lodge, Mrs. Fee says.

Another worry which has arisen for some business owners in Big Sur is gasoline rationing, which has been threatened for this summer, because of apparent fuel shortages. Mrs. Fee fears this may cut into what might otherwise be a good business this summer, especially if rationing takes effect in Los Angeles, which accounts for most summer business.

"If that's the case, business here and in Carmel will be hurt," she says. "All of our business in the summer comes from the Los Angeles area."

THE RIVER VILLAGE, completely covered by the mudslides, remains closed, as well as the postal boxes which line the lower level of the structure.

THE FORCE of the mud can be read in the piles of rubbish, rocks, cars, and trailers which were wrenched and pounded by the slides.



WORK STILL goes on with bulldozers to clear away the mud and rocks which covered Big Sur last winter. Piles of material such as this are visible along Highway 1.

WHERE CARMEL VALLEY ROAD MEETS HIWAY 1

REMEMBER WHEN?

50 YEARS AGO:

From The Pine Cone, May 19, 1923

WHEN IT COMES to staging something sensational the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, one of whose members was forcibly ejected from a meeting, has nothing on the Carmel Board of Trustees.

In the midst of a busy session on Wednesday night, when the Nelson-Flanders matter came up for consideration, City Atty. Argyll Campbell was reciting the procedure, when Trustee Perry Newberry interrupted to state that he had been informed that the city attorney had acted in behalf of the Flanders' interests in endeavoring to effect a compromise, and that therefore Campbell was not in a position to act for the city. Newberry offered a motion that the city attorney be instructed not to act for the municipality in the matter.

Campbell, replying, said: "This motion is a reflection on my integrity and professional conduct, and should it be adopted my resignation will be immediately tendered." He said that it was a fact that he had conferred with both parties to the controversy, but that in endeavoring to effect a compromise he was acting strictly in behalf of the city if he could present a plan agreeable to the trustees.

Campbell also states that in trying to effect a compromise he automatically forfeited a $500 fee from the city in condemnation proceedings.

At the conclusion of some further talk Trustee T.B. Reardon made a motion that Campbell be tendered a vote of confidence. This motion was seconded by trustee Newberry and unanimously (passed), calling forth wild applause from the audience.

The Oak Grove Meat Market will run a well-stocked wagon to Carmel every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Orders may be phoned to 284.

The trustees of the local public school have had erected on the school premises several new pieces of playground equipment, and for the past week the kiddies have been having the time of their young lives.

25 YEARS AGO:

THOSE WHO attended the first meeting of the Atomic Implications Study Group, at the Sunset School last night, learned some startling things about atomic energy.

Through its use, gold has been changed into mercury (mercury has not yet been changed into gold). Other substances have been transmuted into other substances.

Performing a functional service as well as an aesthetic tone, the Monterey County Symphony Association, Inc. presented the symphony orchestra Wednesday night at the Sunset School Auditorium. Roots of a flourishing culture are to be found in the villages as well as in the large cities. The horizontal accumulation of orchestras, art galleries, literary activities, across the entire country is the final count of the national cultural level; each performing unit is what gives basis to the structure. In such a broad perspective we find the significance of such an orchestra as the Monterey County Symphony.

Edward F. Ricketts, marine biologist and author, died shortly after noon Tuesday at the Monterey Hospital of injuries received Saturday when his car was struck by the Del Monte Express near his home and laboratory in Cannery Row. Taken to the hospital by ambulance, he underwent a three-hour operation before sinking in to a coma from which he failed to rally.

His marine biological laboratory at 800 Ocean View Ave. was a favorite gathering place for his many friends on the Peninsula. It was the setting for short stories by John Steinbeck and appeared in Steinbeck's Cannery Row, as did Ricketts himself as "Doc." He was the author (with Jack Calvin) of Between Pacific Tides, a reference book on marine life, and co-author of Sea of Cortez, written in collaboration with John Steinbeck.

10 YEARS AGO:

From The Pine Cone, May 16, 1963

CARMEL'S GENERAL PLAN, unlike most plans, is not apt to become a meaningless document in time, archaic and ignored. Like the wealthy but otherwise unattractive widow, it will always draw persistent admirers, because it has money to spend.

The automobile today uses more land in the United States than people do. Its requirements for highways, streets, parking lots, driveways, service stations, private garages, repair and storage garages and space for manufacturing and salvaging consumes the geography to a far greater extent than do people or their pursuits. It even comes ahead of agriculture.

If the Presbyterian Church is to get an extension of their use permit so that they may build a Sunday school, and later on get a permit for a 12,000 square foot parking lot south of the present chapel, nothing in the proceedings of the planning commission yesterday would indicate that it may issue from that body.

In a "bonus concert" at Sunset School auditorium on 23 May, the Carmel Music Society will present pianist Samuel Lipman. Tickets for this concert are free, and are obtainable in all Peninsula music stores.

A new source of income for the city is the license tax paid by the Shell Oil Co., whose truck tanks are now delivering in this city.

If owner to be away during the month of June, three adults, white and Protestant, would like to rent. Must have same yard man and maid. Two bedrooms. Carmel or Pebble Beach area.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CONCERNED CITIZENS OF CARMEL:

"The present Town House has served the needs of Carmel's older citizens since 1952. Unable to meet the needs of 1973, it must be replaced.

We respect the sincerity of the three councilmen who voted against a use permit, but believe they were wrong. Replacement of Town House on the present site is not against the law, but contrary to the policy of the three councilmen who voted against granting the use permit. We believe that the people of Carmel support the policy of Mayor Anderson and Councilman Brown, who favored granting a use permit.

Town House does not belong in the crowded commercial district, but in a setting of landscaping, trees and flowers.

The Carmel Foundation is circulating an initiative petition for an ordinance which will permit it to rebuild on the present and two adjoining sites. Registered voters of Carmel-by-the-Sea may sign the petition at Town House, Monday through Friday, between 10 AM and 5 PM.

Some of your neighbors also have petition forms to sign. Here are a few of them."

Odello project still snarled in court

THE ODELLO rezoning and an environmental impact report on it are mired in legal hassles this week.

The Carmel Coalition intends to appeal a decision by Superior Court Judge Elmer Machado last week upholding the rejection of a petition drive challenging the Odello rezoning.

And, in a separate but related matter, Superior Court Judge has taken under submission a demurrer by the attorney for the county supervisors and the Odellos on an environmental impact report.

The demurrer, filed by William Kreutzmann, attorney for the Odellos and the co-counsel for the supervisors, acting as redevelopment agency in the Odello rezoning, contends that the City of Carmel's suit challenging the environmental impact report did not present sufficient facts to constitute a case.

Kreutzmann argued before Judge Lawson last Friday that the report, since it was filed within 120 days after passage by the legislature of a law regulating such studies, met all legal requirements.

City Atty. George Brehmer argued that mere filing of the report did not, per se, meet other requirements concerning the adoption of planning criteria and objectives.

If Judge Lawson grants the demurrer with leave to amend, the city could make additional allegations, Brehmer said following Friday's session.

If the demurrer is granted without leave to amend, the city could appeal the decision. If the demurer is denied, the way would be cleared for issuance of a temporary restraining order halting any development of the Odello project until an adequate environmental impact report is filed.

In any event, the project appears headed for a lengthy legal entanglement.

Before taking the demurrer under submission, Lawson granted a motion to consolidate the two lawsuits Brehmer had filed on behalf of the city.

A petition for writ of mandate filed by the city was incorporated into another lawsuit, as a second cause of action, which seeks to have Odello development permanently enjoined.

Attorney Richard N. Little Jr., who represents the Carmel Coalition, said Judge Machado's decision upholding County Clerk Ernest Maggini in rejecting 800 petition signatures challenging the rezoning decision, will be appealed.

The signatures, if permitted to be accepted by elections officials, would have brought to a county-wide referendum vote the 3-2 rezoning decision by supervisors.

The signatures were filed March 8, the same date the rezoning took effect, and Maggini ruled they were too late for inclusion with other signatures to force the referendum.

LAWYER Kreutzmann argued that his demurrer is based on amended Assembly Bill 889, and should be considered as adequate since it was completed and adopted by supervisors Jan. 23, 1973, within the 120-day period from Dec. 5, 1972 spelled out in the law.

He said the purpose of the law was "to do away by the legislature with the confusion" stemming from California Supreme Court decisions on environmental impact reports and their criteria.

"In 1970, there was a broad attempt to preserve the heritage of California," Kreutzmann said. "The problem was there were no guidelines promulgated. There were spot attempts, but there were no clean-cut requirements or guidelines."

He said the 120-day period spelled out in the "urgency bill" passed by the legislature amounted to a "moratorium" on such reports.

"The complainant does not argue that the environmental impact report is improper, with respect to the moratorium period. They argue it was improper with respect to guidelines which came in in April of 1973," Kreutzmann said.

He argued that the situation is "analagous to the statute of limitations," where "even if an act is done, if it is within a certain period, the law doesn't touch it."

Kreutzmann said the adequacy of the environmental impact report is not the issue before the court. The only issue is whether it was submitted and adopted according to the pertinent laws in effect at the time.

Brehmer said the city's position is that the report did not comply with the requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act of 1970, since it appears to have been a report prepared by a private developer, rather than by contract to a public agency or by a public agency, as required by the law.

"The mandate of the law is very strong in respect to the environmental projects and environmental impact reports," Brehmer said, noting that the required contents of such reports were spelled out in 1970.

"It is simply inconceivable that the legislature would contend that EIRs completed in that four-month period would be sufficient, merely because they were completed," he said.

"If the project here had been prepared with the objectives, criteria, and the procedures of the California Environmental Quality Act, there would be no argument.

"We argue that agencies had no criteria, objectives and procedures in compliance with the California Environmental Quality Act," Brehmer said.

He said "the only logical use of the word 'completed' is completed in accord with the provisions of the act."

The section dealing with the 120-day period did not create a moratorium regarding requirements for full and proper EIRs on projects such as Odello, he said.

"The defendant did not prepare the EIR in a manner legally sufficient, or in a manner which complied with the California Environmental Quality Act.

"We allege the EIR was not prepared in compliance with the law as it existed at the time it was prepared."

The city's suit names as defendants the board of supervisors, the board acting as redevelopment agency for the Odello land, each supervisor individually, and the county clerk.

Recruiter Frank Richardson

He sells the Army in Carmel

SELLING THE ARMY to young people in the Carmel area is a job which has gotten much easier in the past year, says Sgt. Frank Richardson, recruiter.

It's gotten easier partly because of the Army's effort to promote its new image as an all-volunteer force, and partly because of the waning of anti-military attitudes on the part of young people, he says.

In 1970-71, before the beginning of the "new Army," a total of three young men from the Carmel-Carmel Valley area enlisted. But in 1971-72, the number grew by seven times, to 21. "Nobody's dying to enlist, as such, but at least they're willing to listen and hear the merits of both sides," Richardson says.

A few years ago, recruitment for the armed services on high school and college campuses probably merited consideration as a high-risk occupation.

But with the winding down of the Vietnamese war and American involvement in it, Richardson says, young people are beginning to look at the Army in terms of career options, and can separate anti-war sentiment from anti-military prejudice.

"They're more apt to listen than they were two or three years ago," he says.

Richardson's area of responsibility includes Carmel, Carmel Valley, Big Sur, Pebble Beach, and Pacific Grove. He says his job is "primarily public relations between people and the Army."

Richardson makes talks at Carmel High School and other schools in his district, and talk informally with people about the "new Army" and training available to recruits.

"I work with the school counselors, too," he says. "If they have a boy who is dropping out of school who wants to join the service, I try to induce him to stay in school."

"The services are looking primarily for quality people with high school diplomas," Richardson says.

Whereas recruitment under the "old Army" resulted in approximately half high school graduates and half who had not finished high school, now the ratio is three to one.

"That makes it more difficult. But we have so many technical skills, we need qualified people to do these jobs. We need people with education."

Richardson says he believes the improved pay, the volunteer Army concept, and the emphasis on career skills are the incentives which are luring more young men into the Army.

One of the young men from Carmel who recently enlisted in the Army is a 21-year-old Carmel High School graduate who signed up because he wanted military police training. As a part of his enlistment, he received a 16-month option in Europe, Richardson says.

Another 20-year-old Carmel man signed up for the Army because he wanted training in camera equipment repair.

"Sixty per cent of the people I interview like school and veterans' benefits, as well as active duty benefits," Richardson says.

"The biggest thing they look at today is what they will receive after enlistment," he says.

MANY OF THE recruits from the Carmel area have completed high school, attended Monterey Peninsula College, or have worked in the area before deciding to enlist.

"My first enlistment was from Big Sur. He had hair down to his waist at the time. I just happened to stop and talk to him on the street in Carmel. After looking over the opportunities we offered, he decided to go into the Army."

This particular youth was 19 years old at the time, and was somewhat undecided what to do, and had an openly hostile attitude toward the armed services at the outset, Richardson says.

He estimates that 30 percent of the recruits he enlists are from Carmel, 5 percent from Carmel Valley, 5 percent from Big Sur and about 15 percent from Pebble Beach.

"About 60 percent of the people I talk to don't know anything about the military. I'd say about 20 percent of them wouldn't go in the Army even if you offered them $1 million," Richardson says.

Despite this, he says he rarely is confronted with personal hostility when he appears to speak before students.

"You can't fool a kid," he says. "If you're trying to con them or lie to them, you're dead. But most kids talk to me on the basis of mutual respect.

"My object is to keep them in school and make them realize that a diploma is the most important thing. I think the concept of the volunteer Army is working -- it's just a matter of contacting them."

Richardson has taken a salesmanship course which was paid for by the Veterans Administration. "This course just gave me the tools to project myself better," he says.

"We're trying to show people what we can offer them," he says. "You have to contact people to do this. If you do this to enough young people, they might not join today, but they'll join tomorrow."

"The idea of travel appeals to everybody," he says. "Most kids today want to do their own thing and be their own people. A lot of them enlist not because they want the Army but because they can get what they want.

"Some people confuse discipline with punishment. It's not that at all. It's designed to build you and mold you and help you achieve the goals in your life."

Richardson says not too many of the recruits from the Carmel area have enlisted for combat arms, and estimates that "20 percent in high school are anti-military, and they're the loudest.

"One young man from Pebble told me he didn't want to enlist because he would have to cut his hair. He came down and talked to me, and enlisted a week later. He said he was getting tired of all the parties his parents were having."

Richardson has signed up only one female from the Carmel area -- a girl graduate of Carmel High School who enlisted for the Army in December of 1972. Eight girls have enlisted from the entire Monterey Peninsula since the start of the volunteer Army.

"Women have the same opportunities as men in the Army, except for combat arms. The reason women are taking a look at the services is because they want equal opportunities."

SGT. FRANK RICHARDSON

'Green Panther' comic strip

Mystery group aims guns at Norberg, council

A GROUP of people with carefully-guarded identities is waging what amounts to a full-scale propaganda war against the Carmel City Council and, specifically, against Councilman Gunnar Norberg.

The vehicle is the "Green Panther Comic Strip" drawn by Al Wiseman, which appeared in the Pine Cone April 12 and May 3.

Wiseman, who lives in Salinas and describes himself as a free-lance cartoonist, says the cartoons are intended to bring about "better government" and to expose "hypocrisy."

Three-term Councilman Norberg, who is depicted in the strips as a Viking dressed in horned helmet, believes the comic strips represent an ineffective attempt by political foes to sabotage whatever following his ideas may have on the council.

"Carmel needs new management," Wiseman says. "The public is getting shafted. I'm just trying to help the many friends I have who want to correct things."

Wiseman, who used to work for Hank Ketchum, originator of "Dennis the Menace," says he lived in Carmel in 1953 and has retained an interest in local politics.

But he carefully points out the ideas for the comic strip are not his own. "I'm not the quarterback -- I'm just the hired gun."

The people who pay Al Wiseman and who pay for the advertisement in the Pine Cone are "people dedicated to setting things right," the cartoonist says. He says they intend to run a slate of candidates for city council as the final result of the cartoon effort.

"I can't mention who the people are, but they're local people who live in Carmel and Monterey," Wiseman says.

"Norberg and Anderson (Mayor Bernard Anderson) talk out of both sides of their mouth."

Wiseman says the concept of the Green Panther was struck upon to symbolize those over-zealous environmentalists who "are trying to stop progress.

"Anytime anybody wants to do anything for community development, they want to stop it. A good example is the Sierra Club -- a bunch of pseudo-intellectuals who use just as much gas as anybody else. It's 'frogs before people' with them. We say people come first."

Wiseman believes Carmel is a "closed society -- the people who've got it made don't want anybody to come in and compete. Green Panthers are people who talk out of both sides of their mouth."

He gives as an example of Green Panthers those Pebble Beach residents who voted for Prop. 20 "and then want exemptions after it passes. They are people who take it upon themselves to not give other people a chance.

"We're attacking hypocisy. The more people that are aware of it, the less hypocrisy there will be."

But the cartoonist says he sees nothing irregular in a group of people paying for a newspaper cartoon, allegedly attacking "hypocrisy," without revealing their identities or making known their intent.

"We're gradually letting the Green Panthers know who they are," he says. "They supply the ideas, and I create the cartoons. I'm working for a better situation and for better government, generally. I'm strictly a hired gun."

WISEMAN BELIEVES "Norberg hasn't come up with a decent idea in 50 years," and confesses the cartoons are aimed not only at Norberg but at policies of the city council which inhibit what the unnamed group of people sees as "better government."

Who are "they," and why are they gunning for Norberg?

"The people involved are likely to be land developers, subdividers, promoters, and large land-owners who feel they would like to see the restoration of a full and complete laissez faire policy in Carmel and Carmel Valley," Norberg says.

Norberg says he doesn't know precisely who is behind the cartoons, but is philosophical about them.

"I would say the cartoons considerably miss the point, whatever it may be which is intended," he says. Instead of inspiring laughter and ridicule at him and his viewpoints among fellow councilmen, "the likely possibility is that it's the other way around," Norberg speculates.

Norberg has been elected to three terms on the city council, in 1958-62, in 1964-68, and in 1972. During those years, he says, he has witnessed a growth of acceptance on the part of fellow councilmen for his environmental opinions.

"For a good part of this third term, some part of the council has been willing to stand in opposition to excessive development or high density development," he says.

"I've been opposed to this all along, but I'd been in the minority. Now, the council votes with me more. Now, these views have some sort of majority view."

The next city council election is in April of 1974, when the terms of Bernard Anderson and Ken Brown expire. The other three seats -- now occupied by Norberg, Mrs. Florence Josselyn, and Olof Dahlstrand -- do not expire until April, 1976.

"It is difficult to understand precisely why this kind of attempt at caricature is being advanced by the type of cartoons so far presented," Norberg reflects.

"I don't have any knowledge of who, as individuals or as an organization, is represented," he says, although he realizes "the finger is pointed most nearly at me," since he has been depicted in both cartoons.

"Some people have said they would be furious, but they don't know what or who to be furious at," he says.

The councilman says he bases his assessment of the effectiveness of the cartoons on his experience as a journalist and magazine editor in New York, where he worked for Fawcett Publications before coming to Carmel in the 1940's.

The apparent strategy of the cartoons, Norberg says, is to "make me or make my following think of my actions as inconsequential," and may be the result of a desire on the part of "developers and subdivers who have deplored for a quarter-century my point of view.

"I think the cartoon effort is probably missing the mark." R.M.

Foundation for Conservation

sets first public meeting May 24

The Monterey County Foundation for Conservation will hold its first annual general meeting next Thursday, May 24, at 2 p.m. at Rancho Canada Golf Club.

Three guest speakers will address the meeting, which is open to the public.

Brad MacDonald, legislative consultant for the Santa Cruz Board of Realtors, will outline the movement underway in three counties to unite realtors' and citizens' groups in an organization to be known as "The Central Coast Regional Coalition of Concerned Citizens."

Bob Senz, executive secretary of the Santa Cruz Taxpayers' Association, will describe the activities of their organizations in regard to planning and development.

The final speaker will be L. Victor Riches, prominent planning consultant from Los Altos, who will discuss "The Power of Truth in Land Use Education."

Riches has been involved in extensive consultant work on the Monterey Peninsula and prepared the master plan for development of the 20,000 acre San Carlos Ranch in 1965. At present he is preparing two position papers for the Foundation for Conservation on the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan and slope densities.

Riches worked with attorneys Myron Etienne, Jr. and Brian Finegan, and engineer Carl Hooper, to assist the Foundation for Conservation with the recommendations it submitted last September for changes in the controversial area plan.

This same group is now preparing a second summary of the plan for the Foundation, which will emphasize five points:

The need to define the flexible and amendable character of general plans; the economic need for incentive clustering, to make moderate-priced housing available to a large, unserved population in Monterey County; the "costly inefficiency" of the proposed critical review process which duplicates the function of the required environmental impact reports; the "ambiguous and confiscatory nature" of the classification for "open space" in the plan as applied to large, privately-owned areas; and the preservation of prime agricultural land.

Keith Evans, former member of the Monterey County Planning Commission is president of the Foundation for Conservation.

Reservations for the meeting on May 24 may be made with Bruno Odello, 624-4776; Russel Hansen, 372-7511; Sherley Ashton, 624-9239; or William Barker, 422-9063.

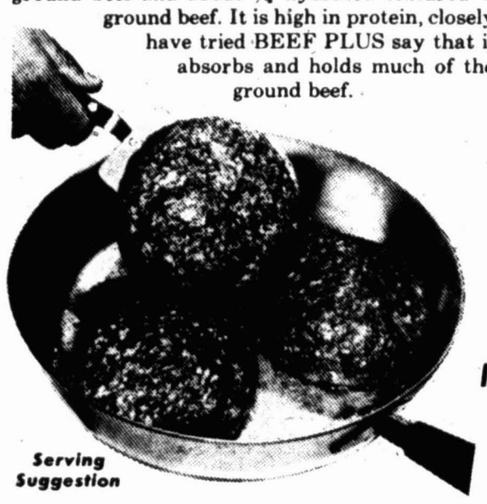
BEEF PLUS BRAND... NEW AT SAFEWAY!

BEEF PATTY MIX...A BLEND OF BEEF AND TEXTURED VEGETABLE PROTEIN...

BEEF PLUS is a wonderful new Patty Mix now being offered in Safeway Meat Departments. It's a blend of about ¾ Safeway ground beef and about ¼ hydrated textured vegetable protein which is delicious, nutritious and lower in cost than ground beef. It is high in protein, closely matching ground beef in this important characteristic. Many people who have tried BEEF PLUS say that it tastes better than ground beef. The vegetable protein in BEEF PLUS absorbs and holds much of the meat flavor and many of the juices which are usually cooked out of ground beef.



Serving Suggestion

BEEF PLUS can be used just like ground beef . . . In 'burgers, meat loaf, spaghetti sauce . . . in every ground beef dish, plain or fancy. We invite you to try BEEF PLUS with our money-back guarantee of satisfaction.

BEEF PLUS can save you money in two ways . . . It costs less per pound than ground beef. It holds meat juices better in cooking and so makes plumper patties, hamburgers, and Salisbury steaks.

Conventions this week

Only four of the 24 conventions meeting on the Monterey Peninsula this week will be convening in Carmel area hotels.

Sunday, 30 representatives of IBM arrived at the La Playa Hotel for a meeting which will last through tomorrow. From Monday through Wednesday, 20 representatives from Nestles Chocolate Co. met at the Highlands Inn.

Tuesday and Wednesday, 25 employes from the San Jose Mercury News met at the Highlands Inn and meeting from today through Sunday at the Highlands Inn will be 70 members of the Judicial Council.

The largest convention of the week was held at the Del Monte Hyatt House when 350 members of the American Gas Association arrived Tuesday for a four-day meeting.

CBA asks January Crosby date

The Carmel Business Association has sent a letter asking Bing Crosby to return the annual Bing Crosby Golf Tournament to its traditional January date.

The proposal is for the 1974 Crosby tournament to be Washington's Birthday weekend, which would be Feb. 16-18. The CBA, like other organizations on the Monterey Peninsula feels this date would adversely affect local business.

"Not only would the Washington's Birthday weekend represent a substantial loss to the economy of the Monterey Peninsula, but we feel it would greatly inconvenience those who attend the tournament," the letter states.

"This weekend is traditionally one of the busiest times of the year. Accommodations would be extremely difficult and would greatly contribute to an already over-crowded situation and many small business people including restaurants and inn keepers depend greatly upon the January business generated by the tournament."

The Carmel Business Association represents some 350 business and professional people in the Carmel area. Members include motels, retail shops, realtors and restaurants.

The letter was sent with the unanimous vote of members present at a recent board meeting.

Kiwanis donation

The Carmel Kiwanis Club has donated $118 to the Carmel Police Department for support of its physical education program at Sunset Center.

Morocco presents travel variety

By JAMES S. ASHLEY
Ashley Travel Agency

Last fall, three friends and I decided to see as much of Morocco as possible in three weeks.

We arrived in Tangier, where we were met by a car and Wafdi Mustapha, our driver, who would become our close friend on one of the most interesting trips I have taken.

Our itinerary covered the four imperial cities: Rabat, Meknes, Fez and Marrakesh; we would cross the Atlas, Middle Atlas and the Anti-Atlas Mountains; visit outposts on the edge of the Sahara Desert; drive along the beautiful beaches along the Atlantic Ocean and even go to Goulimine to see the famous Blue Men, and to the oasis of Zagora, where the road ends and a sign proclaims "Timbuctoo -- 52 days by Camel."

After an enjoyable two days in Tangier, we drove to Meknes, stopping enroute to visit Roman ruins at Volubilis and the holy city of Moulay Idriss. Meknes is an interesting city, dating from the 17th Century, which is modern for Morocco. We enjoyed seeing the Royal stables, the medina (old walled part ofthe city), and the souks (markets).

Continuing to Fez, we stopped at a market, held in a field in the country. The people had come by foot, donkey and bus and almost everything imaginable was for sale: food, livestock, clothes, and many of the luxuries of life. Fez was founded as the first capitol in the early ninth century by the son of an Arab prince from Badhdad.

Its university is the oldest in the world and Fez is the cultural and religious center of Morocco. The finest handicrafts come from Fez and the shopping is marvelous. It was my favorite city in Morocco and the medina is fascinating, although you dare not go into it without a guide, as you might never find your way out! We stayed at the Palais Jamai, which is located just inside the city walls in the medina. It is a former palace and has a modern wing that has just been completed. We had lovely views over the town with its beehive activity.

After two days we headed for Erfoud and the desert, crossing over high mountains until we reached the desert and followed down the gorge of the winding Ziz River, which cuts a ribbon of green through the desert. Erfoud is a large oasis with many date palms and was a former Foreign Legion outpost overlooking the vast expanse of the Sahara Desert.

The next day we continued to Rissani, the end of the road where the present Royal dynasty was founded. Close by are the ruins of Sijilmassa, which rivalled Fez and Marrakesh in importance during the Middle Ages. It was sacked in the 15th century and today only the ruins are left.

On leaving Erfoud we followed the Ziz River back to Ksar es Souk and on to the Oasis of Tinerhir. The color was beautiful and varied, it could be called a "painted" desert and we passed many old forts, built of mud, by the French Foreign Legion. Actually until World War II very few Europeans had ever been in this area.

The Grand hotel de Sud at Tinerhir is located on top of a small hill beside the ruins of an old palace-fort and overlooks the town and the small surrounding area which receives enough water to make it a brilliant green. Bleak mountains and desert surround it.

The town is built of mud houses and it has a large souk. We followed a little stream between high rock cliffs until it became so narrow that the car couldn't continue. Roses are grown along the river and are harvested for the perfume factories in France. We followed the Draa Valley on to another oasis by the name of Ouarazazate. Here we found a nice selection of Berber rugs.

From Ouarzazate we turned again into the Sahara, passing through barren gorges to Zagora, which seems to be at the end of the world; however, we continued on an unpaved desert trail to the oasis of Tamgrout, an almost forgotten village, which has a library containing some of the earliest Arabic manuscripts, written on Gazelle skins nine centuries ago and in a perfect state of preservation. On returning to Zagora we saw folklore dances and then headed back to civilization.

Taroudant is a delightful place and has two beautiful hotels, the Salam and the deluxe Gazelle d'Or. This city was almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake a few years ago and a new city has arisen. It has magnificent beaches and resorts and one has the feeling of being on the Riviera.

On a Friday we made an excursion down to Goulimine to see the famous Blue Men and their camel market. Driving via Tiznit we arrived at about 4 p.m. at the Hotel Salam, which was the most "primitive" hotel on the trip. It has about 20 rooms, few with private bath, and is built in the Kasbah-style. That evening we had a very good dinner in the small dining room and then saw the famous Guedra dances. It was certainly worth the trip down just to see the dances, which are seen nowhere else. They consist of heavily draped and bejewelled tribal women moving rhythmically to the beat of Guedra drums.

The next morning we were up at dawn to visit the camel market, which is located just back of the hotel. There we saw the famous Blue Men who are desert nomads. They wear distinctive blue robes, hence their name. Different tribes come into Goulimine every Friday and Saturday to do their shopping and trading and then disappear into the Sahara until once again they need supplies.

THIS DRAWING of the water sellers in the market place in Fez suggests the human tempo which greets the traveler.

From Agadir we drove along the coast to Essaouira before turing inland to Marrakesh, which scarcely needs describing. The thing that I will always remember is the main square in the later afternoon. Almost anything imaginable is for sale. There are food stalls for the hungry, entertainment of every kind, story tellers, acrobats, snake charmers, musicians, magicians, doctors, dentists, fortune tellers, and letter writers, with seemingly thousands of people milling around. After wandering through this massive square we went to the top of a restaurant and sat watching the activity.

We found the people to be friendly and with a great sense of humor; if you say "no" with a smile you are left in peace. We found the hotels and food to be very good throughout Morocco and most of the roads in good repair.

Rabat, the capitol of Morocco, is a fine city and the new section is similar to any major city. We enjoyed our visit to Chellah, which has an old, ruined mosque and a number of tombs from the 14th Century. You can also see the Royal Palace from the outside.

Casablanca is the largest city in Morocco and the last that we visited. It has a little of everything -- a medina, modern section, fine residential sections, beaches and marvelous shopping, but after the desert and Fez it seemed too big and modern. When it was time to leave Morocco, it was with regret and with the hope that we would return before too long.

KING SOLOMON'S AIRPLANE?

"An ancient manuscript dealing with King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba contains the earliest historical reference to airplanes. The manuscript declares, 'King Solomon gave the Queen of Sheba a vessel wherein one could traverse the air (or wind).' " (Pine Cone, May 19, 1923)

Flanders estate suggests country manor

The unmistakable aura of an old-world country manor lingers over the Flanders estate and its grounds.

With very little imagination, gentlewomen in sprigged muslin and gentlemen in cravats and riding breeches can be conjured up strolling about the well-manicured grounds.

The mansion and its gardens and lawns complete with resident quail, has been proposed for sale by the city of Carmel as a private residence. The public will have the opportunity to tour the house and gardens from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

At last Tuesday's city council meeting, council members unanimously agreed to hold an open house at the mansion, so the citizens of Carmel could see what the city purchased last summer and what the city may soon sell.

The 14.9-acre estate, which includes the house and grounds, belonged to the late Paul and Grace Flanders. The city purchased the acreage from the estate of Mrs. Flanders last August for $275,000.

The northeast corner of the Flanders property is adjacent to Mountain View Avenue and its southern boundary runs into the city-owned Doolittle property and a portion of Martin Road.

The old Presidio-Mission trail over which Father Junipero Serra traveled, runs through both the Doolittle and Flanders properties and is the only existing segment of the historic trail still in existence. The city plans to keep all of the properties, except the house and grounds, in open space with the historic trail marked for the public.

The council, at its meeting, received an administration committee report which found that "it is in the best interests of the city to sell the property to the highest bidder for single family residential use."

If the mansion were sold, deed restrictions would include stipulations that the building and grounds would be subject to design review; that the use of the property be permanently restricted to single family residential and that "no further subdivision of the property be permitted."

The landscaped area surrounding the house is impressive and the view found by wandering through an arch in the tall hedge, is a breathtaking one of the forested Flanders and Doolittle properties, the Carmel Mission, Carmel Bay and Point Lobos.

At first glance, the old ivy-covered house -- built in 1924 by Paul Flanders for $17,500 -- looks weathered, but strong. On closer inspection, however, the tell-tale signs of age and neglect can be seen throughout the house.

The house has four fireplaces, four and one-half baths, nine bedrooms (the count includes the servants' quarters), a small den, a tiny library, a dining room, a living room, a kitchen, an unfinished attic, a two-car garage, a butler's pantry, a dining nook, a basement running half the length of the house and two ingeniously constructed secret rooms.

A man who must have had a tendency toward the mysterious, Paul Flanders designed the two secret rooms into the plan of the house. One of them can be found by pushing open the back wall of a shallow closet and the other is accessible only through an approximately two-foot square hinged door in the wall of the master bedroom. This little trap door can be hidden behind a chest of drawers and no one would be the wiser unless they started measuring and knocking on walls.

Living room and dining room doors are massive, arched and hand carved. The dining room floor is of hand-made tiles surrounding an insert of wood where the table should be placed.

A magnificent and very old coal stove, which has been converted to gas, dominates the kitchen. The guest room's most impressive feature is a mural of Spaniards and Indians trading in what could be old Monterey. The mural covers the upper portion of each wall and the ceiling.

Most of the rooms in the house are large and the entire structure covers 8,200 square feet.

The city staff estimates that it would cost from $50,000 to $75,000 to repair the structure.

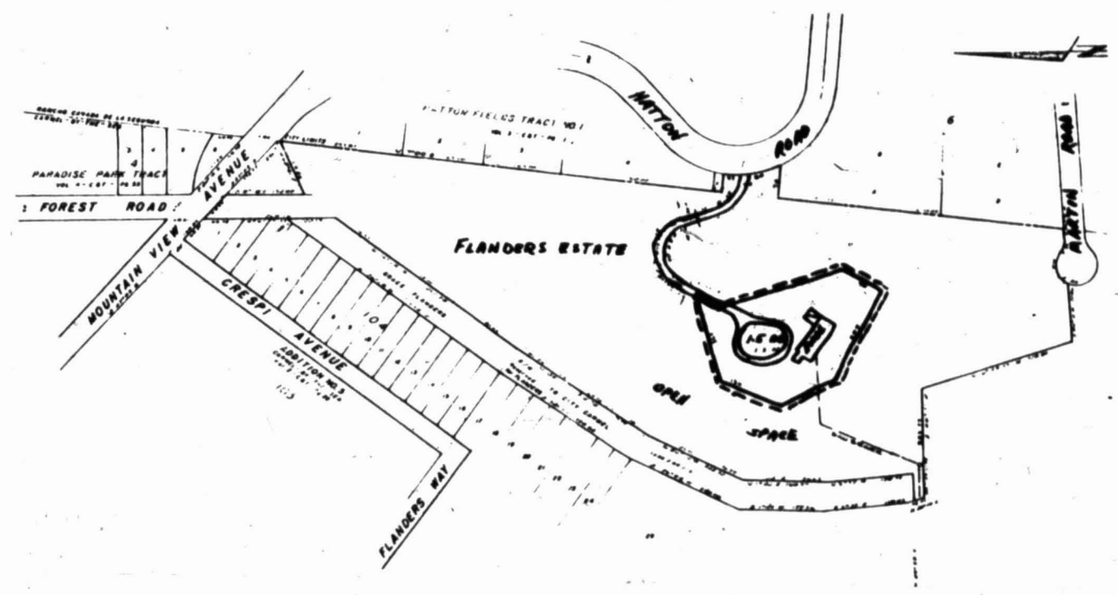
The city has compiled a list of deficiences in the mansion and will distribute the list, and a map of the property, to the public at the open house.

The list includes: installation of a complete new electrical system, which would require cutting into the plaster walls and burying conduit for new wires, outlets and switching; connecting the house sewer line to the sewer main; repairing all windows; treating the house for termites; repairing or replacing all bathrooms; repairing part of the foundation; repairing portions of the roof; replacing plaster on the ceilings, and rebuilding, reducting and venting the entire heating system.

On Sunday, City Administrator Hugh Bayless said, the public will be required to park on Hatton Road because the grounds cannot accommodate many cars. A shuttle bus will be provided to take people to the mansion. Members of the city staff will act as guides and conduct people through the house and around the grounds.

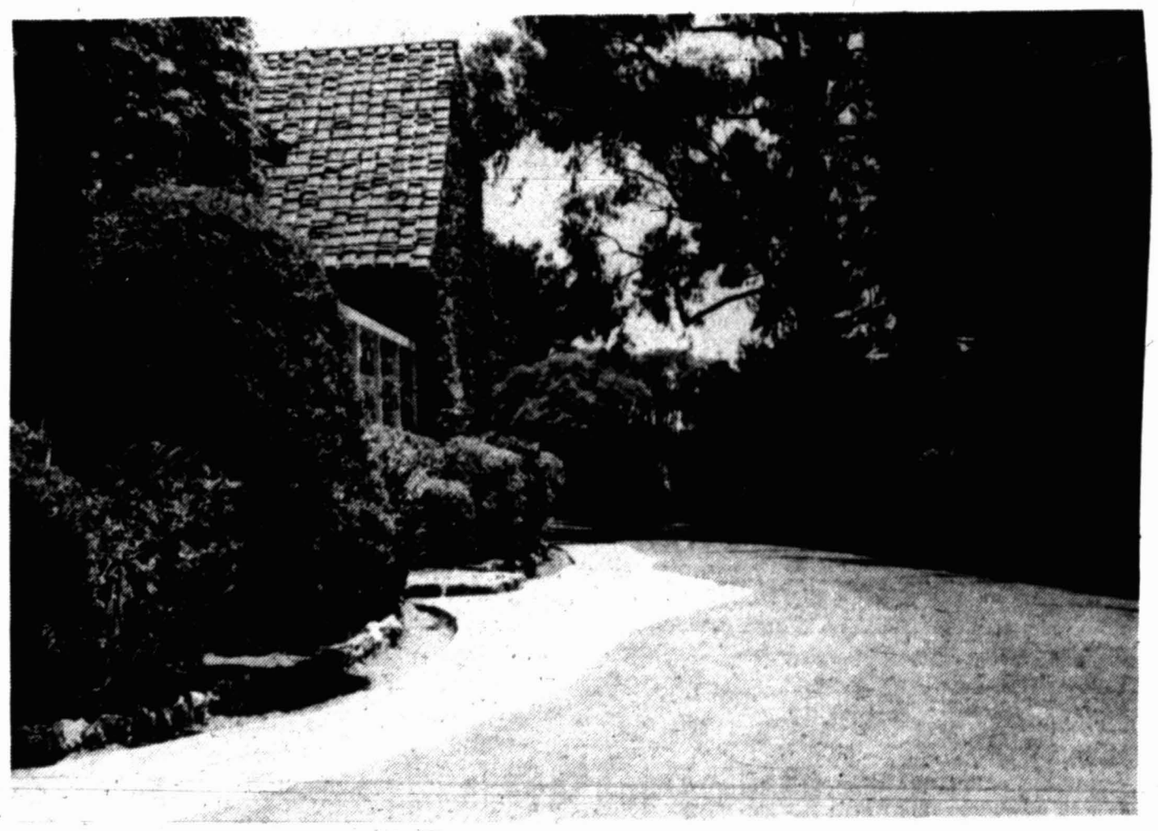
PLOT PLAN OF THE FLANDERS ESTATE

Showing the location of the Flanders Mansion and the 1.5 acres of landscaped grounds.



THE CITY will distribute this map of the Flanders estate and the house and grounds to the public during the open house Sunday.

VIEW OF the Flanders mansion with its surrounding landscaping from the circular drive, suggests the rolling expanse of a country manor.



THE REAR of the mansion can be seen facing lawns and the natural forest of the rest of the Flanders property. The land gives a view of Carmel Point and Point Lobos.

A visit to Lion Country

Over the week-end while visiting in the Balboa-Newport Beach area, Pine Cone staff member Bebe Wilkerson was taken on a Lion Country Safari.

"She reports: "The one visited in Orange County has portions of the African veldt so remarkably imitated that with very little imagination one feels one is there in the presence of the awesome, beautiful animals roaming freely about in their natural environment. On entering the preserve each car is given a tape recorder encased in an exotic spotted pelt. This was our 'guide.' The car windows had to remain closed at all times.

"Prides of lions and groups of zebras were often right in front of the cars. Only the rangers in their striped jeeps are permitted to get them to move along. The animals have no fear at all of the cars.

"There are perhaps 150 of the magnificent lions. The king is surrounded by affectionate females.

"The giraffes put on a most amusing show, completely tying up the traffic for some time. They had a fascination for a family camper. One peered down several times, craning his long, long neck to look in the window.

Try some Big Sur cooking

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

COVERAGE in The Pine Cone about the filming at Big Sur of "Zandy's Bride" brings to mind the excellent fare at Nepenthe, that most picturesque of rendezvous... After a very busy day until about 7 p.m., the crew, actors, officials of this Western certainly should enjoy the great "chow" at Nepenthe, 30 miles south of Carmel on Highway 1. The specialty of the house is a generous ambrosia-burger. Made of the choicest ground sirloin beef, theirs is not just another meat patty. It is grilled to order over red hot coals, served in a basket with French bread and a fine selection of crisp salads -- grabanzo-kidney, tossed mixed greens, crunchy cole slaw or a combination of all three.

Nepenthe stands beside the original Log House at Big Sur more than 800 feet above sea level. When Lolly and Bill Fassett took over the property they realized the magnitude of the vistas was too too overwhelming to keep just for themselves. So out of their perceptiveness Nepenthe grew into an isle of "no-care". The restaurant building is constructed of native materials -- redwood and adobe -- so that it appears as united with the sheer cliff upon which it stands. By day (lunch starts at noon), by moonlight or by the big fireplace when one sits and gazes and listens, it is fantastic.

But we cannot subsist on views alone, so practical Lolly selects cheerful, casual and well coordinated girls and young men who serve with polite abandon. They enjoy what they are doing. The winding, twisting drive to Big Sur with the most dramatic coastal scenery imaginable, will excite one's appetite for more.

There are many libations to appease the thirsty such as the Greek aperitif "ouzo" ... like yesteryear's absinthe. For dinner there are superior charcoal-broiled New York cut steaks or the Phoenix Bird's Favorite Steak sandwich and the Nepenthe Salad Bowl plus a really classic olive oil and wine vinegar dressing with or without crumbled roquefort and fresh herbs.

Sometimes you might choose a plump-breasted broiled chicken half. Or your guests will enjoy a change of pace by ordering grilled buttery fresh swordfish or salmon.

Reservations are advised. There is a fascinating gift shop called The Phoenix Bird where fruit drinks are dispensed. The hills are now covered with wildflowers brilliant from prolific rains. Here are some tips for made-at-home beef burgers welcome after our self-imposed meatless meals. Always handle ground meat lightly to keep tender. To shape an ample patty, use eight ounces per serving.

Home-on-the-Range Burgers

For a twosome, use one lb. best ground beef; one clove garlic, mashed; one green onion, minced; one tbsp. chili sauce or ketchup; one egg, stirred; one tbsp. prepared mustard-horseradish; one tsp. A-1 bottled sauce; sourdough hard rolls, split; salt and pepper; sliced dill pickles.

Blend burgers with a quick touch, adding seasonings, and egg. For into two large patties or four smaller ones. Broil to desired degree. Serve between toasted buttered rolls, or have the bread passed separately with the pickles.

Big Sur Patties

Two lbs. ground round; one tsp. seasoned salt; dash cracked pepper; one slice stale bread, cubed; one-half cup dry red wine; one cup grated cheddar cheese. Choice of bottled condiment sauces.

Combine ingredients delicately, then mold meat into same size as long loaf of garlic French bread (found in frozen counter of super markets). Defrost bread. Slice lengthwise across. Barbecue meat, wrapped in foil, over hot coals six inches from heat. Place this between toasted bread slices. Keep hot on grill. Cut into serving slices. Pass the bottled sauces; raw sliced tomatoes; Bermuda onion rings. Serves four to six.

Rice-Stuffed Hamburgers

Combine one and one half lbs. ground beef; one tbsp. salt; one-half tsp. pepper; one egg; one and one-half cups cooked white rice; fine bread crumbs; butter.

To form the center of each patty, shape meat around the rice to make balls; roll these in crumbs and saute in butter; simmer, covered, five minutes.

Wine has a special talent for improving the flavor of freshly caught fish. Nepenthe's own is the grilled in butter swordfish. Our favorite, now that trout and salmon are in season, is:

Wine Poached Trout

Two cups dry white dinner wine; two cups canned chicken broth; splash of crumbled dill; seasoned salt to taste; four thin slices onion; sprigs fresh parsley and mint; wine vinegar or lemon juice; six medium trout, heads removed; watercress; fresh strawberries and lemon garnish. Green mayonnaise, yogurt or sour cream. Serves six.

Combine all items except garnish. Put trout into pan large enough to hold fish. Cover with seasoned stock, poaching gently five minutes, or until fish flakes quickly with fork. Let cool in liquid. Remove skin and center bones from fish carefully so as not to destroy shape. Serve each chilled whole trout on bed of watercress with strawberries and lemon quarters.

For the green mayonnaise, mince together tender, well-rinsed young spinach leaves, chives (frozen or fresh), green onion tops; parsley, capers and lemon juice and add to homemade or commercial mayonnaise. This same treatment may be used with equal success for Monterey Bay-caught fresh pink salmon.

Walnut halves, dipped into melted butter, lightly heated, then sprinkled with mixed powdered sugar and cinnamon, are eaten out of hand with polished red apples for dessert.

World of Pets

By Norma Kays

TURTLES

UNDERSTANDING the needs of animals is of prime importance when handling and caring for them. Knowing their instincts, habits, background, etc., enables us to understand the reasons for their behavior in almost every situation.

It is the moral responsibility of every pet owner to educate himself on his particular pet (s). Getting this kind of education is very simple and inexpensive. Pet stores have little booklets on practically every kind of animal kept as pets. These booklets cost around 35c and they give good, basic information. The library is also an excellent source of information.

No matter what kind of pet you have, you owe it to that pet to give it the best possible care. It is an unhappy but true fact that pets' lives are held very cheaply in many families. Parents allow their children to bring pets into the house with no supervision or guidance as to the kind of care they receive. A sad example is the tiny turtles sold in dime stores and pet shops. Millions of these little creatures die every year from neglect and-or lack of knowledge as to their needs.

A friend brought one of the little semi-aquatic turtles to me about two years ago because, as she said, "he needs love -- he's just not doing well at all." Her little girl had had him about a year and he was the same size as when the bought him. He was kept in a small plastic, kidney-shaped container, complete with plastic tree. He was fed the boxed "turtle food" sold in pet shops as part of the "package." I knew nothing about turtles, but after seeing this pathetic little reptile, I was determined to try and give him a better life than he had previously known. The turtle book I purchased from a pet shop enlightened me considerably.

Here are some things I learned about turtles:

THEY NEED an aquarium arranged so that they have dry land and water. The water should be deep enough for them to swim and eat beneath its surface. Flat stones and pieces of wood should be placed on the bottom of the aquarium so the turtle can hide or bask at will. The water should be changed at least once every three or four days. Temperature is extremely important. These little turtles come from southern areas and require a temperature ranging from 75 to 80 degrees. Sharp drops in temperatures are very harmful to them. Lights are built into aquarium lids for this purpose. A 40-watt bulb is usually adequate. When putting fresh water into the aquarium, make sure it is of room temperature to avoid chilling.

Sunlight is a must for good health. Artificial light will do if no sun is available. Be sure your turtle has a shaded area to escape to, though, in the event the sun's rays get too hot. Hot sun can be fatal to reptiles.

Raw, chopped, lean beef or fish is a recommended diet, with occasional bits of lettuce or other tender vegetable leaves. A pinch of bone-meal and a drop or so of cod liver oil should be mixed with the food as often as possible. The dried "ant eggs" sold in pet stores are not recommended, nor is a straight diet of house flies. Tri-weekly feeding is usually sufficient, taking care to see that the food is consumed. Indifference to food in winter is not necessarily a sign of illness, as they have a tendency to hibernate.

AFTER READING the turtle book, I immeduately purchased a used aquarium complete with lid and light for $5.00 from a pet store, and started my little friend on his new life. The change in him was remarkable. In less than four months he grew to twice his original size, was happy and healthy, and active. He loved the sunshine and would bask on his favorite rock with eyes closed and all four feet stretched out in mid-air. He took his chopped meat and fish from my finger, snatching it quickly and ducking underwater to eat it. (I do not recommend this method of feeding for small children, however, because often, in the turtle's eagerness for the food, he may accidentally grab a finger!)

He had a definite personality -- when I arrived at home in the evening, he would swim immediately to the nearest side of the aquarium and paddle frantically in one spot, wanting me to feed him. When I started toward him with the food on my finger, he would climb quickly onto his "feeding rock". I became very fond of him, but felt rather sorry for him because I felt he must be very lonely in that small area all day long.

Mrs. May, of the SPCA, told me of a young man in the area who is an expert on turtles and after talking to him, I decided that my little turtle friend would have a much better life with him. I check on him from time to time and am happy to report that he has a mate now and is getting along very well. "Why all the fuss over a turtle?" you may say, but I think it was worth it.

HOISTING THE FLAG of surrender, George D. Rockwood, owner of The Village Corner, capitulated to PG&E street crews working to undergound utilities along 6th Avenue. (photo by John Livingstone)

Carmel merchant 'surrenders' to PG & E

Incessant jack hammers and pounding street machinery proved to be the undoing of George D. Rockwood owner of the Village Corner at 6th and Dolores.

The Carmel fountain owner ran outside, hoisted a white flag, and "surrendered" to the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. crew which was working to underground utilities.

He flew the white cloth from an upside-down broom in his flagpole holder as a symbol of capitulation.

"They've been here, off and on, for three years, digging up the same place, back and forth, so I finally surrendered," he said. Passersby stopped and gazed on with astonishment and the PG&E crew responded with amusement when Rockwood flew the white flag last Friday.

"They have the jack hammer going day after day. I surrendered, but they're back here again today," he said Monday.

"The way they work is like cutting the tail off the dog an inch at a time," Rockwood said. "They do a little bit now and a little bit later."

Rockwood said one merchant in the vicinity closed his shop for a couple of days because of the noise, but did not blame the workers.

"The workers got a big kick out of it. Several people saw it and commented on it, and how long it's been going on."

A spokesman for PG&E said work is part of a project to place utility lines underground along 6th Avenue from Monte Verde to Junipero.

He said most of the noisy digging should be finished by next week. The project is being completed in two increments, the first of which was completed last year.

The spokesman said no work will be done this summer, but the final removal of poles will be done in the fall.

Little League family day

The Carmel Little League will sponsor a Family Day Sunday at the little league field at Atherton Way and Rio Road.

The festivities will start at noon with carnival games, three gaseball games between parents, coaches' and girls' teams, and raffled prizes between the games.

As many as 100 local merchants have donated prizes for the raffles, according to organizer Vienna Prieto. They include gift certificates, free pizza and similar prizes.

The event is to raise funds for new equipment and improvements. Because little league is a non-profit organization, all expenses are tax deductible.

Admission to the games is free.

Circle Theater reopens with 'Adaptation'

The Circle Players will reopen the Circle Theater with a one week presentation of Elaine May's off-Broadway comedy hit "Adaptation," accompanied by modern dance and improvisational theatre.

"Adaptation" will run Thursday through Sunday, May 24-27. Performances will begin at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights. On Sunday, May 27, the show will be a matinee, beginning at 2 p.m., followed by an outdoor barbequed chicken dinner.

General admission will be $2. The Sunday matinee with dinner will cost only $4.50. Call 624-2271 for reservations.

The renovation of the Circle Theater has been in progress since last summer, when a group of young theater artisans undertook the challenge of bringing the theater's physical condition back up to code.

The acting troupe presented a benefit performance last July, but further shows were delayed until the theater could be rewired.

Now the Circle Theater is open and anticipates a full season of plays, dance, lectures, film, and multi-media this summer and in the seasons ahead. Particular emphasis will be placed on experimental work in theater forms, new American playwrights, and spontaneous improvisational acting (in which even the audience at times participates.

Following the performance in May, the Circle Theater will host a double bill of Israel Howowitz plays, "Rats" and "The Indian Wants the Bronx," with dance and improvisations, as usual, to be presented in June.

Take a film trip to Russia

By FRANK H. RILEY, Director
Community and Cultural Activities

THIS ALWAYS SEEMS to be a sort of let-down season of the year. All the great series -- symphony, Chamber Music Society, Carmel Music Society, Hidden Valley, and Explorama -- complete their seasons in May; and then we have a few weeks of coasting until the Bach Festival takes over for July.

I must say that all the winder-uppers were great -- the symphony's choral-orchestral program on Monday, the youthful musicians of the Chamber Music Society on Saturday; Lilit Gampel brought here by the Carmel Music Society May 5. All were eminently notable. Only Explorama remains to terminate the various offerings.

The final adventure-travel film of the Explorama series will be presented tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. in the Sunset Center Theatre. It is billed as "Czechoslovakia and the Ukraine." Produced and filmed by Clay Francisco, a familiar figure on the travelogue circuit and a frequent lecturer in the Sunset Center program, it is an account of a 5,000 mile journey through Eastern Europe's legendary kingdoms of Bohemia, Moravia, and Slovakia in Czechoslovakia and the Ukraine in Russia.

Visit Prague, "city of a Hundred Spires;" glimpse into the life of composer Antonin Dvorak; see the old walled city of Tabor; witness a folk dance festival at Straznice; Kiev, capital of the Ukraine; Odessa; see Bratislava on the Danube; and view a performance of the Ukrainian Folk Opera. This is a rare look at a part of the world where few westerners have ventured. Julia Marlowe - Tickets in Room 8A here at the center can supply you with tickets.

An unusual and interesting event scheduled recently on our calendar is a performance by the Modern Dance Group of Carmel High School. They will give their program at 8 p.m. next Thursday, May 24. Tickets for this event will be sold at the door, and all funds received will be used to further the dance program at Carmel High School. Thus, by attending you will gain for yourself an evening of enjoyment while at the same time you will be making possible the continuance of a very worthwhile program for area youth.

WE HAVE BEEN the recipient of a generous gift from a resident who has been a loyal supporter of the Sunset Center programs. The purpose is to modernize Room 4 and make it suitable for meetings of up to 50 people. We hope to equip it with a small serving pantry to accommodate the serving of "tea," and to provide for small exhibits, conferences, slide and film showings, intimate recitals, and for social occasions such as bridge afternoons, wedding receptions, and similar events. Everything is now in the drawing board stage, but we hope to have a completed project by the fall.

Anyone who would like to provide for similar updating to Room 3, companion Room to 4, should address the Carmel Cultural Commission, c/o of the manager's office at Sunset Center. Such interest in the Sunset Center project by citizens is not only encouraged but is also deeply appreciated.

By the time you read this, the interesting photo exhibit sponsored by the local United Nations Association will be gone from The Marjorie Evans Gallery and we will be arranging and hanging our new exhibit from the Smithsonian in Washington. Called "Beginnings of Bay Area Shingle Architecture," it consists of 88 photographic plates showing many examples of this unique Bay Area architecture. Of special local interest is the fact that many of the homes and buildings that are depicted are from the exclusive work or collaboration of Bernard Ralph Maybeck, designer of our own Harrison Memorial Library. An explanatory text refreshes us on the history of the period. You should find it most interesting. The exhibit will open in The Marjorie Evans Gallery at Sunset Center on May 21 and remain through June 15. It is open free of charge daily except Saturday and Sunday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and is also open one hour before each performance in the Sunset Center Theatre.

Similarly, the spectacular array of "Ojos de Dios" now on view in the Sunset Center Theatre will come down May 20 to be replaced by an exhibit of paintings, batik, and pottery -- all the works of eight instructors who work with the Adult Education Department of the Carmel Unified School District, whose workshops and studios are located in the little building located on the southeast corner of the Sunset Center property. We urge you to plan to see this show -- not only to see the work but also to let yourself be persuaded to join one of the many adult education classes and become personally involved in a creative activity.

The guest curator of the exhibit is teacher-photographer Darryl Curran of Los Angeles, who received his degree of MFA in photography in 1964 from the University of California at Los Angeles.

Some of the non-silver techniques on display include 3M color transfers, photographic intaglio, stuffed photo linen, platinum, gum bichromate, cyanotypes, collages, and collages with film.

Among the works on display are three-dimensional works by Gayle Smalley, Peggy Kerr and Kay Shuper, made with the use of stuffed, photo-sensitized linen and mixed photographic techniques sewn into plastic.

Platinum printing, popular from the 1870s through the early 1920s, was discontinued because of the increasing scarcity of platinum and its rising cost.

But there has been a revival of interest in platinum and other non-silver photographic techniques, centered in the Los Angeles area.

Platinum prints are warm-toned, with uniquely defined scales, or gradations, between low tones which make up the scale between black and middle grey.

Photographer Terry Thompson has included several platinum prints in the exhibition, some of which have been combined with gum bichromate prints.

In the gum bichromate process, a mixture of gum and potassium bichromate, bonded with one or more colors, is applied to watercolor paper and allowed to dry.

The negative, placed on light sensitive chemicals, is printed in direct sunlight. The print is developed by washing in warm water.

The gum bichromate process was used primarily in the early 1900s. Many applications, printings and developments are required to obtain the desired depth of tone in the process.

Artists in the current exhibit using the process are Robert von Sternberg, Terry Thompson, Stephen Josefsberg, John Lawrence, Todd Walker, Darryl Curran, Rodger Hudson Klein and Gayle Smalley.

"RONDA," a watercolor by William Timmins, is one of the works of art on display in the Little Picture Gallery at the Carmel Art Association throughout May.

Speaker Moretti, who is one of five potential Democratic candidates for nomination for governor, will be in Carmel Room 20.

The public is invited, and the donation will be $2 per person.

Dog licenses

Carmel police remind residents that city dog licenses for 1972-73 expire May 30.

If residents renew their licenses before then, they cost $3. After that date, the registration fee is $5.

Dog licenses are dispensed at City Hall.

WATER TEMPERATURE

"The water of the Pacific Ocean is colder near its shores than farther out at sea," the Sept. 12, 1963 Pine Cone stated.

Mini-shows featured at Art Association

Featured during the month of May are the watercolors of Irene Lagorio, who exhibits two landscapes and two florals in her distinctive style and a varied group by William Timmins, including landscapes, flowers and a portrait.

One of the newly elected members of the association, Bernice Huber, also has a special showing here this month of two landscapes, one in oil and one in watercolor. Kay Rodger's watercolors form another grouping of landscapes on lovely soft colors, and some small paintings in Chinese inks and colors by Alison Stilwell complete the mini-exhibits.

Also showing in the Little Picture Gallery are Merilyn Brown, Van Megert, Molla Moss and Helen Dooley. The Carmel Art Association is open to the public daily from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 6th and Dolores.

MARION DURHAM makes her debut on the Studio Theatre stage in a featured role in "The Girl in the Freudian Slip" which opened last weekend. Photo by John Livingstone

Fine cast has romp in 'Girl in the Freudian Slip'

IT'S A COMEDY to be sure, but it's also a wonderfully funny satire.

That needs to be said about "The Girl in the Freudian Slip" which opened last weekend at Carmel's Studio Theatre.

In addition, it's wonderfully well performed. Jon Baldwin, the Studio's new director, assembled a splendid cast, a pleasing blend of experienced local talent with several beautiful newcomers.

Jim Jordan, who appears altogether too infrequently on the Carmel stage, is simply superb as Dr. Dewey Maugham, the psychiatrist around whom the action swirls.

As his wife, there is Donna J.R. Conne, always comfortable and confident in whatever role she assumes. As their daughter Leslie, Michele Nichols comes across the footlights as a real comer.

Then there is "the girl", in the person of Marion Durham, a new and refreshing face indeed. She is more than believable as provocative Barbara Leonard, a former patient of Dr. Maugham, who returns just in time to see herself in a starring role in his typed-out fantasies, this time as a literary agent.

The mixture also includes Lewis Leader as Mr. Wellman, now two years deep in analysis under Dr. Maugham. He has the funniest scenes in the play and brings them off with aplomb. The playwright, William F. Brown, has tremendous fun with this role, demonstrating as it does the monumental nonsense of what is called "unstructured analysis." In the end, poor Wellman of course has a monumental triumph. The kind that only a devilishly clever playwright could dream up.

THE ROLE of Dr. Alec Rice will be played for the rest of the run by Al Hood, the well-known Carmel Valley flyer. But for the opening weekend it was self-entrusted by Mr. Baldwin himself. Dr. Rice is the kind of "family friend" quite common in our society today, a bachelor type who fits in comfortably where needed, or even where he is not. Mr. Baldwin had no trouble at all sliding into the role.

Anyhow, there is a great deal of merriment involved in the situations set up by Mr. Brown. Particularly when a jealous wife finds her husband, the psychiatrist, in a compromising situation, and all hands (except the daughter) make what appear to be very human, but destructive, responses to these emotional crises.

But the doctor finally marshalls all his resources and emerges triumphantly successful in resolving the dilemma. The evidence doesn't justify it, but then I guess that's what the play is really all about.

It must be said that Mr. Baldwin brings together a most entertaining evening. A collection of beautiful people, saying clever things, acting frustrated, seductive, overwrought or whatever the script calls for, in a quite professional manner.

The lights and sets were designed by the producer, Robert H. Evans Jr., and they were, as usual, fine. Roy St. Clair served as assistant to the director, Renee Wurzmann as a technical assistant and Roberta Little was her usual efficient self as stage manager.

"The Girl" plays for six more weekends at the Studio and you'll find it refreshingly diverting after those many dreary nights viewing the vast wastelands of televisionland. GMD

'Alice in Wonderland' coming to White Oaks

"Alice in Wonderland" is coming to Carmel Valley's White Oaks Theatre, presented by Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

This production of Lewis Carroll's classic marks the first extended run for the Magic Carpet. In the past, the Magic Carpet has performed only one day a month for the general public and spent most of its time touring schools from Big Sur to Stanford. "Alice in Wonderland" will be performed three weekends in June -- Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m. and Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m. -- starting June 1.

The exterior doors on the White Oaks Theatre will be open for "Alice," and the audience will look down the valley toward the ocean. The Magic Carpet will bring to life the characters of wonderland with the Carmel Valley sunset as a backdrop.

The set is made up of giant spools that are used for storing cable. In wonderland, thanks to Pacific Telephone, M.P.T.V., and P.G.&E., cable spools of assorted sizes will become mushrooms for the Magic Carpet to play on, around, under and through.

"Alice in Wonderland" will open Friday, June 1 at the White Oaks Theatre, Carmel Valley Road at Ford Road.

Two concerts on tap for high school band, chorus

Carmel High School's music department will present the annual spring concert at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Monterey Peninsula College.

There is no admission to the concert, which will be held in Music Building M-1. Henry Avila, music department chairman, will direct the high school choir and band.

Selections the choir will perform are: "The Water is Wide," by L. Zaninelli; "Sanctus," by M. Haydn; "Ave Maria," by de Victoria; "Praise to the Lord, the Almighty," by H. Distler; and "Cherish-All My Trials," by E. Lojeski.

The band program will include: "A Festive Overture," by A. Reed; "My Fair Lady" selections, by J. Cacavas; "Preludium and Fugue," by L. Brunelli; "An Irish Rhapsody," by C. Grundman; "The Southerner," by C. Bainum; "A Trumpeter's Lullaby," by L. Anderson; and "Napoli," by H. Bellstelt.

The guest cornet soloist will be Gordon A. Finlay, a member of the Sacramento Symphony Orchestra, and guest cornet soloist with the Navy Band for 20 years.

After retirement, Finlay was associated with the Long Beach Band as soloist, and he taught for five years at the University of the Pacific in Stockton.

He is currently brass instructor at the University of California at Davis, and he teaches for the Davis public schools.

Music concert at monastery

A special concert presented by the Monterey Peninsula College music department will be presented Monday (May 21) at the Carmelite Monastery on Highway 1 south of Carmel.

Featuring the 17-piece brass ensemble, the theme of the program is "Historical Sounds of Brass Music."

Dr. Henry Smith, chairman of the creative arts division, said the program is made up of religious musical selections from throughout history and includes some contemporary pieces.

The concert begins at 7 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Two plays give insight into 'Hamlet'

By ELLEN S. KESTER

TWO CONTRASTING and interrelated plays, Shakespeare's "Hamlet," and Tom Stoppard's "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," being presented through May at Monterey Peninsula College, provide a challenge to both actors and audience.

Acting and technical achievements in the opening performances demonstrated both productions have much to commend them.

diversions

Several Carmel residents figure prominently in each.

John Boles plays Claudius in "Hamlet," Shirley Thomas plays Gertrude, and Ramon Wilson plays Polonius.

"Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead" is directed by Peter DeBono. Chris Thomas plays Rosencrantz, and Ron Boyer Guildenstern. Tom McCleister is "the player," while Janice Roth and Karen McCoy are ladies in waiting.

Bob Beach is stage manager, and Jean Miller is costume designer. All of the above are Carmel residents.

Morgan Stock, director of "Hamlet," and his cast focused on a Hamlet who is vividly aware that "the time is out of joint." Robert Bradoc portrays this conflicted, complex, subjective tragic hero with unusual sentience. Christina Concolino, as Ophelia, received an ovation at the conclusion of her "mad" scene in Act IV, Scene V, but she, like Bradoc, had her audience with her right from the start.

The demanding "get-thee-to-a-nunnery" scene, was especially well directed by Stock. The audience was acutely aware that these young lovers -- indeed, everyone in "rotten Denmark" -- had been victimized by the unscrupulous Claudius.

Another fortunate bit of casting was the role of Polonius played by Ramon Wilson of Carmel. His interpretation of the sententious old politician, Polonius, in the "to thine own self be true" farewell scene with Laertes was most delightful. This, and, the even more comical "lesson-in-espionage" scene with Reynaldo, established vividly the "foolish prating knave" who is the victim of his own bungling.

John Boles' interpretation of Claudius was most convincing in his soliloquy, "O my offense is rank ..." and in the first scene of Act IV when he expresses the fear which conveys to the audience that he knows that hamlet knows. But his earlier scenes lacked the bravadowhich would have conveyed the contrast between this usurper and what a king should be.

Notable about Shirley Thomas' Gertrude, was the lovely "there is a willow grows aslant a brook" comment on Ophelia's death. But the "queen's closet" scene with Hamlet, was disappointing. Academic speculation over the past 400 years has shed very little light on Gertrude, but one Shakespearean scholar, Robert Speaight, has called the closet scene, the "emotional, although not, theatrical climax" of the play.

"The time is out of joint" is also one of the themes of Stoppard's play. This play, first produced at the Edinburgh Festival in 1966, is written in the style of the absurd.

DeBono and his cast rose admirably to the challenge.

THE TWO PLAYS in the MPC repertory this month interweave in a montage effect in the Stoppard script. The scene in "Hamlet" which most obviously was Stoppard's inspiration was the scene in which Hamlet confides, "I have of late -- but wherefore I know not -- lost all my mirth ..." Stock blocked the three actors down left on the steps, close to the audience.

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, former friends, now turned traitors in their spying pursuits, contrast vividly with the intellectualizing, philosophizing tragic hero. Shakespeare's reflection spoken here by the agonizing Hamlet, is the same predicament which Stoppard is dramatizing in his absurdist treatment: "What a piece of work is a man ... the paragon of animals ... and yet to me what is this quintessence of dust?"

Chris Thomas as Rosencrantz and Ron Boyer as Guildenstern admirably handle the nonsensical dialogue with its ping-pong effect, ossified cliches, mistaken identities, and their incomprehensible mission. Regretfully, except for Bradoc's Hamlet, and Christina Concolino's brief appearance as Ophelia, the rest of the cast did not reflect a strong supporting constellation. Even "the player," the main role among the tragedians, except for the ship scene, did not convey the dissemblance necessary in that role.

In both of these productions, there were some innovative technical devices. John Stephans, Mike Aason, Bob Beach and their assistants should be recognized especially for the voice of the ghost, the sounds of the opening of Claudius' court, and the blackout at the moment of Rosencrantz' and Guildenstern's deaths. The almost total darkness of the two ghost scenes seemed almost too natural.

Theatrically speaking, a more "supernaturally" costumed ghost would have enhanced the shock and wonderment of the guards. In the original productions at the Globe, in natural daylight, Hamlet's reactions in this pivotal scene could be seen by the audience.

Thornton Harby's set and the costumes by Jean Miller and Mary Fisher and their assistants, were artistic and colorful.

Santa Catalina presents 'Will Shakespeare'

"WILL SHAKESPEARE", a play by Clemence Dane, will be performed at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday at Santa Catalina School.

It is the story of "that Stratford boy," as Queen Elizabeth called Shakespeare, after the death of Christopher Marlowe.

It was first performed at the Shaftesbury Theatre in London in 1921, and a few years later launched Katherine Cornell to stardom on Broadway.

Details of the death of Christopher Marlowe are unknown. This is an "invention in four acts" of the close friendship of Marlowe and Shakespeare and the jealousy between them over a lady of the court.

The play will be directed by Charlotte Perry of Carmel, co-founder of the Perry Mansfield summer school in Colorado, and resident director at Santa Catalina for 17 years.

The title role is played by Katie Budge, and Lucy Butler plays Kit Marlowe. Others in the cast are Jessica Andrus, Collette Cuttler, Lani Hawes, Pam Phillips, Ann Politzer, and Jessica Jones.

An original score has been composed for the play by Mrs. Margaret Farlinger of Monterey, a member of the school's music department.

There is no admission charge and the public is welcome.

Hitchcock series ends

Two Alfred Hitchcock films, "Psycho" and "The 39 Steps," will be shown at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Monterey Peninsula College in Lecture Forum 103 as the final shows in a series.

The program is being presented by the MPC Film Appreciation Club.

The film stars Janet Leigh, Anthony Perkins, Martin Balsam, Vera Miles and John Gavin.

More funding possible for Hidden Valley

Peter Meckel, executive dean of Hidden Valley Music Seminars, has returned to Carmel Valley after an 11-day trip to Washington, New York, Boston and Chicago in search of more funds and new program possibilities for the expanding HV departments.

Meckel met with administrators of the National Endowment of the Arts in Washington to discuss possible funding for new programs in music, theater and dance.

He said Hidden Valley will apply for assistance to develop a program in which a chamber orchestra would be in residence year-round on the White Oaks theater campus in Carmel Valley Village.

Meckel also met with officials at the State Department to discuss a possible cultural exchange tour for Hidden Valley students. Meckel said Hidden Valley had been asked to participate in an exchange tour several years ago, but had not been able to complete arrangements at that time.

Meckel said no decision has been reached yet about a specific tour, but that if Hidden Valley decides to participate, the trip would come in the next 12 to 18 months.

Meckel received encouragment and support in Washington from Congressman Burt L. Talcott, who praised HVMS as a "world renowned cultural institution."

In New York, Meckel conferred with several foundations active in supporting the arts and visited the American School of Ballet. HVMS has recently absorbed Patricia Wester's widely acclaimed Studio of Dance Arts in Carmel Valley and plans to put increasing emphasis on ballet in its future productions.

In Boston, Meckel met with Norman Dello Joio, Dean of the School of Fine and Applied Arts at the University of Boston, who has been commissioned to do a major work for Hidden Valley.

Meckel said this will be a "madrigal ballet," based on a myth, which will be written for orchestra, choral and dancers. It will be presented at a world premier by HVMS in August, 1974.

The HVMS Children's Theater will put on "Alice in Wonderland" the first weekend in June, and summer dance classes will begin on June 15.

In July, the Renaissance Lute and Dance Foundation of San Francisco will take over the White Oaks Theater for classes and public performances.

Seventy-four outstanding music students from throughout the United States will arrive in late July to attend the annual music seminar, which runs from July 29 to Sept. 2. Students will live on campus, and use the cafeteria at Tularcitos School for meals.

THE MUSIC CORNER

By IRVING W. GREENBERG

THE TWO WINNERS of the Second Annual Carmel Chamber Music Auditions, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society were presented in a public concert last Sunday afternoon at Sunset Center in Carmel.

The judges for this audition were Corrick Brown, conductor of the Santa Rosa Symphony Orchestra; Erno Daniel, professor of music at the University of California, Santa Barbara; Rosario Mazzeo, faculty, University of California, Santa Cruz; and Gabor Rejto, chairman of the string department, University of Southern California.

By instituting these yearly auditions, the Society has given young, aspiring musicians the opportunity to perform together and to be heard in public performances. The two prize winners this year immediately created an aura of excitement and set the stage for a stimulating concert, thus showing that talented young people, sincere in their musicianship and having good basic training, can give performances that are completely on a high professional level.

The first prize winner of $500 ($100 for each member of the ensemble) was the Spectrum Ensemble from the California State University at San Jose, coached by Dr. Lauren Jakey. The personnel of this group is as follows: Raymond Cultrera, violin; Marilyn Martella, clarinet; Diane La Brie, violin; Kathleen Davis, cello, and Vickie Morton, viola. They performed two important chamber music works: The Brahms Quintet for Clarinet and Strings, Op. 115; and the Mozart Quintet for Clarinet and Strings, K. 581.

The Brahms Quintet for Clarinet for Strings, in which the clarinet is the carrying instrument of the ensemble, is in four movements, and is a sweetly autumnal work of the composer. The opening theme by the strings was brought out in tragic plaintiveness, with the quality of the clarinet playing in the pervading ascendancy. The rapport of the group was in very good order. The nostalgia of the second movement again leaned quite heavily in its conceptual treatment on the clarinet. The lovely intonation and good dynamics with accurate tempi of the group gave this movement the wistful cheerfulness of the composer's conception.

The complex character of the finale based on a set of variations, was displayed with a charming variety of mood and tonal color. In general, this was a good, workmanlike performance that served well to introduce this young chamber music group.

The Mozart Quintet for Clarinet and Strings was another story. Here there was finesse and elegance in a completely classical reading. The ingratiating tone of the clarinet, and, to a lesser extent, of the violin, combined with the other three instruments, afforded a most stimulating performance in real chamber music style.

The group opened the work in a gentle, easily-flowing manner which gained in rhapsodic intensity as it progressed. The romantic scoring of the larghetto was given a beautiful cantilena quality. In the menuetto, the strings, especially the canon between the violin and viola, (the clarinet not participating here), was most expertly outlined, with the clarinet once again entering and singing in a lovely laender style.

In the finale, with its six variations on a pertly graceful theme, the group fully exploited the diversity of the various moods present. There was here a quality of solid musical texture and tonal palette in gossamer-like playing that gave to the work its lovely clarity and definition.

THE SECOND PLACE winner was the Conservatory Art Trio from the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, coached by Paul Hersh. The prize was $50 to each member of the group. The personnel were: Amy Lozano, violin, viola; Tom Lozano, clarinet; Roxanne Michaelian, piano.

They performed a modern work--The Contrasts for Clarinet, Violin and Piano by Bela Bartok. This work was commissioned in 1938 by Benny Goodman at the instigation of violinist Joseph Szigeti and designed for them to play it with the composer at the piano. It is a display piece for three brilliant players, especially the clarinetist and the violinist, each of whom has a cadenza. The idiom is purely Hungarian, but not gypsy.

The three movements are marked "Verbunkos" (Recruiting Dance); "Piheno" (Relaxation) and "Sebes" (Fast Dance). This trio played the work with a keen affinity for a relation to the modern idiom in an exciting temperamental display. The three instruments, in their intensity, were expertly harmonized to give a performance of vivacity.

In the last movement, the change by the violinist of his instrument, normally tuned, to another with the G string tuned to G sharp and the E string to E flat (here, a viola was employed), gave this movement a wonderful quality of tonal response.

It was a most enjoyable concert, and deserved to have had a much larger listening audience.

RECOMMENDED RECORDINGS:

Brahms: Quintet for Clarinet and Strings, Op. 115, Alfred Boskovsky, clarinet with Members of the Vienna Octet on London CM9301.

Mozart: Quintet for Clarinet and Strings, K581. Jack Brymer, clarinet with the Allegri Quartet on Philips 6500 073.

Bartok: Contrast for Clarinet, Violin and Piano, Lemser, clarinet; Lautenbacher, violin; Kontarsky, piano on Turnabout 34480.

The concert last week of the San Francisco Symphony under Seiji Ozawa, before their tour of Europe and Russia was the essence of a great orchestral performance.

The two outstanding works programmed were the American composer Charles Ives' Symphony No. 4 and the Johannes Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D major.

Although the Ives symphony has many elements that at times seem not to integrate too easily, it is still a work of immense proportions and of stimulating originality. Although rarely played, and therefore not too well-known, it was exciting in its dynamic vitality, at the hands of the San Francisco players, with Ozawa giving it the tremendous scope and the tonal balance that it demanded. Undoubtedly, more Charles Ives will be programmed during the coming year, as 1974 is the centenary of this composer's birth.

The Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D major is a work of flowing melodic dignity. Its four movements each depict the grace and charm of this introspective and nostalgic music. Ozawa gave it a reading that was well-paced, and had all the qualities of a towering musical experience. Its various moods between the movements were beautifully delineated, with the San Francisco players being keenly aware that this concert was the finale of a great musical season, and was, in addition, an introduction to the forthcoming European tour beginning May 15 in Paris.

The brochure featuring the coming 1973-74 season promises a most enjoyable artistic and musical season.

Jazz concert Wednesday

Ralph Humphrey and Dale Ramey will be guest soloists in a jazz concert scheduled for 8 p.m. Wednesday (May 23) in Monterey Peninsula College's Music Hall.

Humphrey is presently the drummer for "Frank Zappa and The Mothers of Invention." He has been featured drummer with Don Ellis for the past five years and has played on campus at last year's sell-out concert.

Ramey, an MPC guitar instructor, has played professionally around northern California. He and Humphrey will also play in a quartet with Don Schamber, MPC instructor, on the piano and Bug Jones, local all-star musician, playing bass.

Also on the program is the MPC Jazz Ensemble and Biff Smith's group. The Jazz Ensemble is composed of MPC music students, and Smith is an English instructor at the Robert Louis Stevenson School.

General admission is $1.50; students and military, $1. Tickets will be available only through Jazz Ensemble members or at the door.

THIS VACANT CORNER at the intersection of Rio Road and Carmel Rancho Blvd. isn't likely to remain covered with weeds and brush much longer. The Meharry Development Company has filed an application to construct a 162-unit motel here. Last week County Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon ruled that the project will require an environmental impact report. If the use permit is eventually approved, the motel will be comparable to the Holiday Inn, out of sight to the left on Rio Road, which has 165 rooms. The Meharry project is proposed for 11 acres out of a total of 25 acres along Rio Road which are zoned for motel-hotel use. Photo by George T.C. Smith

Red Cross asks donations

The Red Cross needs donations to help support its effort in aiding disaster victims in the Midwest.

"I have visited the flood area in the Midwest and I regret to report there will be an increasing number of disaster victims needing Red Cross assistance. The Red Cross is now providng emergency assistance in 22 states and Puerto Rico to people affected by floods, tornadoes and explosions. A minimum of 28,000 families have been affected," said Frank Sutton, chairman of the American National Red Cross.

"Over 100 Red Cross shelters have cared for 10,000 persons and over 32,000 persons have been fed. The Mississippi area situation is precarious and will continue to be so for several weeks. Government resources are being used to the extent available, but the Red Cross disaster relief funds are totally depleted."

Stanton stressed that the support of the public in a neighbor-helping- neighbor gesture is of vital necessity in order to meet the anticipated financial relief requests.

The American Red Cross Monterey District Chapter, 1760 Fremont, Seaside or the Carmel Chapter, Box AR, Carmel, will accept all contributions earmarked for disaster relief.

Consciousness-raising is a Carmel industry

"To a crisis of the spirit, we need an answer of the spirit. And to find that answer, we need only look within ourselves."
Richard Nixon, First inaugural address

By SUSAN AULIK

CARMEL HAS BEEN a center for spiritual, metaphysical movements since artists and writers settled here around 1900. Groups for higher levels of consciousness are so much a part of Carmel that they are easily overlooked. They are not even considered weird.

Arica Institute is new. This group of 250 adults teaches techniques derived from Western sciences, modern psychology, and Eastern disciplines. The goal for the individual is Satori -- salvation for the planet.

Arica believes that the problems posed by overpopulation, pollution, climatic changes, and mismanagement of resources can only be met by achieving higher levels of consciousness, and thereby having the flexibility, creativity, and sense of community needed for finding realistic solutions.

ARICA TEACHER George Heaton is sold on Arica too, but still looks at other methods. George was born in England, studied engineering at Oxford, had an aerospace job in Southern California and three children and a wife. Then he took a sensitivity training course at UCLA and his life was turned upside down.

He started searching for that "something more" that's supposed to be a part of life. He tried drugs, different forms of meditation, yoga, and ended up with Arica.

Oscar Ichazo, a mustachioed Bolivian mystic and "former Sufi" is the founder of Arica. His goal is to "wake up the planet." Although "O", as the Aricans call Oscar, is the founder and leader of the movement, he is not their guru.

Arica is so new that the teachers sometimes worry that their students will pass them up.

Transcendental meditation (TM) has become a household word. Ten thousand people get "initiated" every month and there don't seem to be any complaints. Scientific American is impressed, the New York Times is impressed, even Cosmopolitan magazine likes TM.

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the guru of the movement, has been talking to legislators all over the country, and even they are getting turned on. There are about 600 meditators on the Monterey Peninsula.

The head of the local International Meditation Society, David Rosenkranz of Carmel, was "checking" someone's meditation in his office. The meditator slowly opened his eyes, and David asked if it was easy. The meditator looked nothing less than blissful. He smiled, "Yes, it was easy."

David asked if there were any problems. The meditator smiled even bigger, "No problems." A few people do have problems, so David and Salinas TM teacher Karen Hudson are available to straighten things out.

Anybody who has heard of TM knows that it is easy and expensive. First the easy part. "Transcendental meditation is an effortless, natural technique which utilizes the nature of the mind which is continuously seeking out greater fields of happiness," Rosenkranz says.

"It does not involve any form of control, concentration, or contemplation. Meditators find a reservoir of unlimited energy and creative intelligence at the source of thought."

You do it for 15 or 20 minutes twice a day. Meditation releases deep-rooted stress which, once gone, results in cosmic consciousness. That's the same as Satori, by the way.

NOW THE EXPENSIVE part. To learn the technique it costs $45 for students, $75 for adults, and $125 for families. That includes a session to learn to meditate with three follow-up meetings to answer all questions, and then a lifetime of advanced lectures which are offered every week.

Where does the money go, isn't truth free?, one may ask.

"The money goes for the overhead of the movement," Rosenkranz says. "Certainly truth is free, just like water is free. One cannot market water. However, one doesn't feel uneasy about paying for the pipes to allow that water to come from the reservoir to our homes. Likewise with knowledge, a true seeker is not pinched by paying for and supporting the organization which serves as a bridge that allows this most precious knowledge to be available to all mankind."

David gave perfect answers. He never showed hesitation or doubt. Was everything memorized?

He explained that everything is learned in Maharishi's words, that way no teacher can add, subtract, or distort the basic message. The teaching will remain pure.

There is always the suspicion that Maharishi is a rip-off artist posing as a monk. David explained that Maharishi is a native of India with a bachelor's degree in physics. He spent 13 years studying in the Himalayas with his master.

Maharishi did not make up TM; it has been passed down from master to master, until Maharishi's master asked him to bring it to the world.

"If he's a con artist, wouldn't one of the world's half a million meditators have busted him by now?" Rosenkranz asks.

Two meditators came in. They had those same big smiles. They were talking about a residence course, a week-end retreat where they do extra meditations, attend lectures, see video tapes of Maharishi, and eat healthy food.

There is no generation gap with a group of meditators. They all have something in common and believe life is to enjoy.

Enid Stepner is a cute, peppy, "freelance" Yoga instructor. She teaches classes at Gardner's Tennis Ranch, the Racquet Club, Beach and Tennis Club, and Pacific Grove Art Center. She also gives private lessons in her students' homes.

She doesn't sell yoga by saying that it leads to enlightenment, although she believes it does. She just says it's "physical exercise through relaxation" which makes you feel good.

ENID BELIEVES in yoga 100 percent. She has a neat attache case carrying her sales pitch, telling why yoga is important and which posh spas offer yoga classes; offering quotes from magazines and books. She has her own speciality -- teaching on an individual basis. She examines her student's personal need, and then prescribes the proper asanas, or postures, to loosen up and relieve the site of stress.

"I believe in myself and yoga has helped me to find the light shines from within." She prefers to work alone rather than within a group or movement. She feels she has to make her own life.

She's not out to turn on the world. In her subtle way she would like to relax the "uptight business men and women" through yoga.

"When they are relaxed, they will be more loving and open, then they'll turn themselves on."

"Jesus freaks," now called Christians, are hard to find around Carmel. The "family" that hangs out at the General Food Store comes about the closest. Twenty-five-year-old Joshua Muir, a logger, welder, brick mason, a fighter of forest fires, boat worker, and one-time student of physics and astronomy, is not a "dyed-in-the-wool" fanatic Jesus freak, but describes himself as "a seeker since he could think."

He got "integrated with the family" when he moved to Carmel from Florida last summer. The family has different metaphysical ideas and beliefs, but all members believe in the existence of God, and the major importance of Jesus. "The family all met each other organically, they didn't walk into an office and get handed a pamphlet."

Despite his rather casual appearance, Joshua talks and thinks like a professor of theology. He carried a huge book called "The Urantia Book -- A New Revelation of Jesus Christ and His Purpose" and a detailed outline of what he wanted to say. He expressed his beliefs in an articulate manner which somehow didn't fit with the first impression he presented.

"Spirit of truth doesn't operate unless in fellowship. Service and prayer is the only way for a man or woman to grow spiritually," he says.

"You get uplifting energy when you accept the will of the Father in your life.

"Faith is to religion what sails are to a ship; it is an addition of power; not an added burden of life. There is but one struggle for those who enter the kingdom, and that is to fight the good fight of faith. The believer has only one battle, and that is against doubt -- unbelief."

He does odd jobs for a living and surrounds himself with "believers." Material success isn't important, in fact, it is a burden, he says.

"Some men's lives are too great and noble to descend to the low level of being merely successful."

A BELIEF in the infinity of man provokes a search for higher levels of consciousness in Carmel. (photo by Betsy Aulik).

The Carmel Pine Cone

SECTION II

Satori, or enlightenment, is quite a goal. But that is the goal of every spiritual movement -- Satori, Cosmic Consciousness, Being, Tao. They all go about it differently. With Arica, it takes 400 hours to reach this state of consciousness.

Satori was described by Arica teacher Brooks Langston as a state of high being and energy -- a clear perception of reality with no intervening thoughts. It is a state of bliss and freedom, living the unlimited self.

There are two parts to us, believers say, essence and ego. Satori is of the essence part.

Brooks reached Satori but then lost it. It can come and go, he explained. No one in Arica has reached it permanently as far as they know. But everyone feels better after the training than before. A scrapbook of before and after photographs of Arica students shows how the tension and stress disappear.

The 400-hour requirement for enlightenment can be met by attending a 40-day intensive training course, which includes gym, meditation, dance, yoga, chanting, group work, body work, essence-to-essence communication, and more.

Arica training works to balance the three centers, mind, heart and body. Brooks explained that we get out of balance as we grow up, that's why some people are cefebral, some are emotional and some are athletic. Arica exercises are to dissolve stress and open up the center that is blocked.

The 40-day course is $600. There are shorter courses, weekends for $50 ($30 for students), and nine-days for $200.

Arica is using a house in Carmel Highlands for a temporary center.

Arica teacher Brooks Langston was studying "Comprehensive and Anticipatory Design Science" at an experimental liberal arts college in Florida before discovering Arica. He feels he has changed drastically since undergoing Arica training. He used to go to a party and someone would say, "Where's Brooks?" and Brooks would be sitting right next to him. Shy Brooks is a thing of the past, he says. He used to have three voices in his head, one that said "yes," one that said "no," and one that said "maybe." That is a thing of the past too. He has found his "thing."

Carmel life

'Bay Day' draws large crowd; Joan Baez sings

The "little red schoolhouse" was taken over by a band of hundreds of gypsies, mostly under the age of 10, last Saturday. The Bay School's annual gypsy carnival brought students, parents and graduates, many in costume, to the one-room schoolhouse for a day of fun and games.

There was everything a gypsy could ask -- a fortune teller, jewelry, clothes, plants, ceramics, lots of good food, and plenty of good people. The parents of the Bay School set up and ran the carnival, but they seemed to have had as much fun as their children.

The little kids were transformed into little Indians for the Indian trail trip. They wore fringed paper bags with painted designs, feathers, and macaroni-bead necklaces for their journey to an Indian village where pretty squaws showed them how to grind corn, make pottery and string beads.

There were movies and games and prizes and thrills for everybody.

Joan Baez came from Palo Alto to the Bay School. Besides seeing old friends, she was asking for signatures for a petition to "abolish torture," sponsored by a group called "Amnesty International." She did a benefit concert years ago to raise the money needed to build the new addition to the school, and sang again at this year's event.

The carnival last Saturday was to raise money needed to earthquake-proof the Bay School. Director Rosa Doner explained that the school would have to be completely rebuilt. She said the 97-year-old school should be a national monument, and in order to maintain the school, it should be in use.

The Bay School was built in 1876, and was sold in 1889 to school trustees John Viera, C. Machado, and M.V. Silva. The land went for $4 in gold, the now famous schoolhouse for $1.

Since that time the school has been in use continously.

Until 1955 it housed eight grades, but when the Highlands Elementary School District merged with the Carmel Unified School District, the Bay School was turned into a nursery school.

The Carmel Parent Cooperative Nursery School was born in September, 1949. It was created by a group of mothers and by Charles Dawson, adult education principal, and the Carmel Unified School District board of trustees.

In the beginning, the school occupied a room in the Church of the Wayfarer, then a basement room of the Carmel Youth Center, and finally the Bay School.

The new section of the school was built with the money raised by a concert given by Joan Baez. The architect was John Cocker, a school father; the designer was John Gamble. Mothers and fathers finished the interior, painted the walls, sealed the floors, and built cabinets.

This year's Bay Day brought in $2,000, not enough to rebuild the school, but Rosa Doner is confident that the rest of the money can be raised soon.

The school will hold other fund-raising events and "some of the Bay School fathers are contractors" which will ease the financial difficulties.

Parents already have raised some $6,000 toward restoration of the school to meet 1935 Field Act earthquake standards, and believe it can be repaired for considerably less than the $30,000 estimated by the school district, if parents help with the work.

Carmel High to present dance program

"Energy on Root," a modern dance concert presented by Carmel High School, will be staged at 8 p.m., Thursday, May 24, at Sunset Auditorium.

Thirty young women will be dancing in this second concert of the year. They choreographed most the dances themselves, which are "light for spring," explained teacher Mary Kay Bridges.

One of the dances is an "ecology Dance" with all the girls dressed in animal costumes. The "Elastic Dance" will be under a black light, with elastic bands attached to their bodies to give an interesting effect.

One of the students, Allison Faul, will sing a song she wrote. Cesca Lucido will perform a mime skit.

Tickets are $1.25 for adults, 75c for students and children. They may be purchased at the door or through participating dancers.

GOING THROUGH REHEARSAL for the dance program is student Molly O'Neal of Carmel Valley. (George T.C. Smith photos).

Carmel Foundation program

Some 70 members of the Carmel Foundation and their guests enjoyed a concert last Wednesday presented by soprano soloist, Jane Strauch, at the Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel.

Included on her program was a variety of songs by classical, romantic and contemporary composers. She closed the program with selections from the popular musicals "Finian's Rainbow" and "My Fair Lady."

Fred Schaad was her accompanist.

Mrs. Strauch has sung major roles in both grand opera and light opera in her home state of Tennessee. She and her husband have resided in Carmel for about four yers and in that time she has become well-known as soloist with the Monterey County Symphony, the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society, and the Hidden Valley Players. She greatly pleased and charmed the audience at the last Symphony "Pops" concert in April.

Tea was served at Town House following the performance.

Here comes the witchmobile

Hershel Smith, a witch-turned-minister, will be speaking in Monterey and Carmel, and touring the area in his witchmobile May 20 to 23.

Smith was a satanist, a worshipper of the devil, for 12 years. He is now on a campaign to "straighten out youngsters who have been burned by the occult."

He knows what he is talking about. Smith made a pact with the Devil at 13 when he and some young friends killed a dog and drank its blood in mockery of the Christian rite of communion.

He was a heavy drinker at 16 and a "morphine addict and alcoholic" in San Francisco by the age of 20.

But at 25, he prayed to God and was saved. Then he enrolled at a Bible collage and has been battling Satan ever since.

Smith will be speaking at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m., Sunday, May 20, at the First Assembly of God Family Christian Center, Prescott and Laine, New Monterey. He will also be lecturing at 7 p.m., May 21, 22, and 23 at the Monterey High School cafeteria.

His witchmobile will be cruising the downtown Carmel area Sunday afternoon, and will be near Monterey High School Monday morning, and near Carmel High School Monday afternoon.

Altrusa holds reception

The Altrusa Club of the Monterey Peninsula, a chapter of Altrusa International, the oldest classified women's service club, held a champagne celebration at the Northern California Savings and Loan community room this week.

The purpose of the meeting was to report the success of the recent District 11 Conference.

Carmel members of the club include Jane Hexter, conference chairperson; Mrs. Donald Lamar and Mrs. Paul McGaughey, flowers and gifts chairpersons; Mrs. Nicholas Limov, registration chairperson; Mrs. David Stevens, finance chairperson; Dr. Iona Logie, publicity chairperson; Dr. Margaret Bennett, and Julia Minor.

Mrs. Cyril V. Church will be installed for her second term as president of the Peninsula branch in June at the La Playa Hotel.

Lauralyn Bankhead is engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Reid E. Bankhead of Provo, Utah, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Lauralyn, to Gaylord K. Swim, the son of Mrs. Dudley Swim and the late Mr. Swim of Carmel.

The bride-to-be, a graduate of Brighton High School in Rochester, N.Y., is a junior at Brigham Young University, majoring in business education.

Swim, a Carmel High School graduate in 1966, attended Pomona College and received his B.A. in Business at Brigham Young University in 1970.

After serving two years in Germany as a missionary for the Mormon Church, he returned to BYU for graduate studies.

The couple will be married in Provo, Utah.

Gamma Phi Beta holds Carmel meeting

Members of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority were treated to a program at their regular luncheon meeting at the home of Mrs. Dale Bystrom in Carmel, Monday.

Mrs. Lela Brown of the Harrington-Brown studios in Carmel showed some of her smaller pieces of jewelry and metal work. She told of her training in the Philippines and in Mexico, and described some of the techniques she used. She recommended a book for those who wanted to try and do something similar themselves. Her metal sculpture has been recognized nationally with, among others, an article on her work in the "Arts and Artists" magazine.

Serving with Dorothy Bystrom on the luncheon committee were Mrs. Robert (Patty) Zampatti, Mrs. Stephen (Bobbie) Hoxie, and Mrs. John L. (La Verne) Strong.

The next meeting will be a barbecue at the home of Mrs. Herbert (Mary) Angier on June 9 with husbands to be included. Any members of the sorority living or visiting in the area are cordially invited to attend and may make reservations by calling Mrs. Angier, 625-1120, Mrs. Elston, at 624-7006, or Mrs. Blight, at 373-3497.

WHY SHOULD WOMEN GET STUCK WITH THE CLUMSIEST CARS?

It's true you need space for the kids and the dogs and the groceries.

But that doesn't mean you have to lug around a giant station wagon.

With the rear seat down, the Volvo wagon has space in back for 67 cubic feet of kids, dogs and groceries. Or a six-foot sofa.

And space in front for a 6½-foot husband.

But outside, the Volvo wagon is exactly the same size as the Volvo sedan. (That's about three feet less to park than the giants. And three feet less to dent.)

A sense of proportion is one of many sensible things about Volvo.

And rear doors with extra locks the kids can't open from inside, so you can keep your mind on the road instead of the back seat.

If all wagons were designed as sensibly as a Volvo, maybe women drivers would have a better name.

Roof rack optional.

BOXING INSTRUCTOR Pat Gallegos watches as Mike Verga works out with a punching bag. The boxing program, just getting started, is taking registrations from Carmel youths.

Sunset Center program offers new boxing course

Registrations are being taken for a new boxing program which will be offered at Sunset Center through the auspices of the Carmel Police Department.

Capt. Bill Ellis said the instructor for the course will be Pat Gallegos, former professional fighter and a physical education instructor at Monterey Peninsula College.

Boys between the ages of 12 and 17 years may register for the new course between the hours of 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at Sunset Center.

The boxing instruction is to start May 21.

The physical education program is also being expanded to include a wrestling course, which will be taught by Greg D'Ambrosio, Carmel's city forester.

The launching of the wrestling program must await the arrival of a floor mat, which will cost $2,000.

The program is being financed through donations. Capt. Bill Ellis and Sgt. Del Wermuth provide the direction on their own time, and the city has made space available to the police and youth at Sunset Center.

Police are continuing their drive for funds, with hopes of expanding the program to include more offerings for both boys and girls.

The program now includes basketball, weight lifting, and soon will include boxing and wrestling. Ellis says he'd like to be able to offer a bowling program for girls and boys eventually.

Funds are needed not only for the purchase of such equipment as wrestling mats and weights, but for the repair of the basketball court floor.

The continued operation of the program depends on continued support, Ellis said, since the program has operated since its inception in February of 1971 without a budget.

Total attendance at the evening sessions since then has amounted to 4,047, Ellis said.

One of his wishes is to expand the program from its thrice-weekly arrangement to a daily program, including some form of physical recreation Saturday mornings.

"We'd like to get into little league basketball, volleyball, and possibly indoor golf, using nets," Ellis said.

The two policemen said they envision instituting a membership requirement for participants, which would result in membership for those interested after a probationary period. Membership would be granted after participants made regular visits.

"An important principle to us is that this is offered free to kids in Carmel," Ellis said. Those from outside Carmel can also participate, but Ellis said the need is great for this type of program for Carmel youngsters.

"I feel if we can provide good, healthful exercise it will keep them out of other things they shouldn't be doing," he said.

"We want to turn our really professional facilities to attract more kids. If you keep one kid from getting into trouble, it's worth it. Kids will be our future society, so why not try to work with them to make them good citizens?"

Grizzly bear shamanism discovered

By DONALD M. HOWARD
Monterey County Archaeology Society

IN NOVEMBER of 1960 this writer discovered a prehistoric burial site south of Point Lobos with five Grizzly bear distal phalanges in association with burial number six. This phenomenon has not previously been reported from Monterey County, although it is well known that grizzlies were roaming the Santa Lucia Mountains as late as 1900.

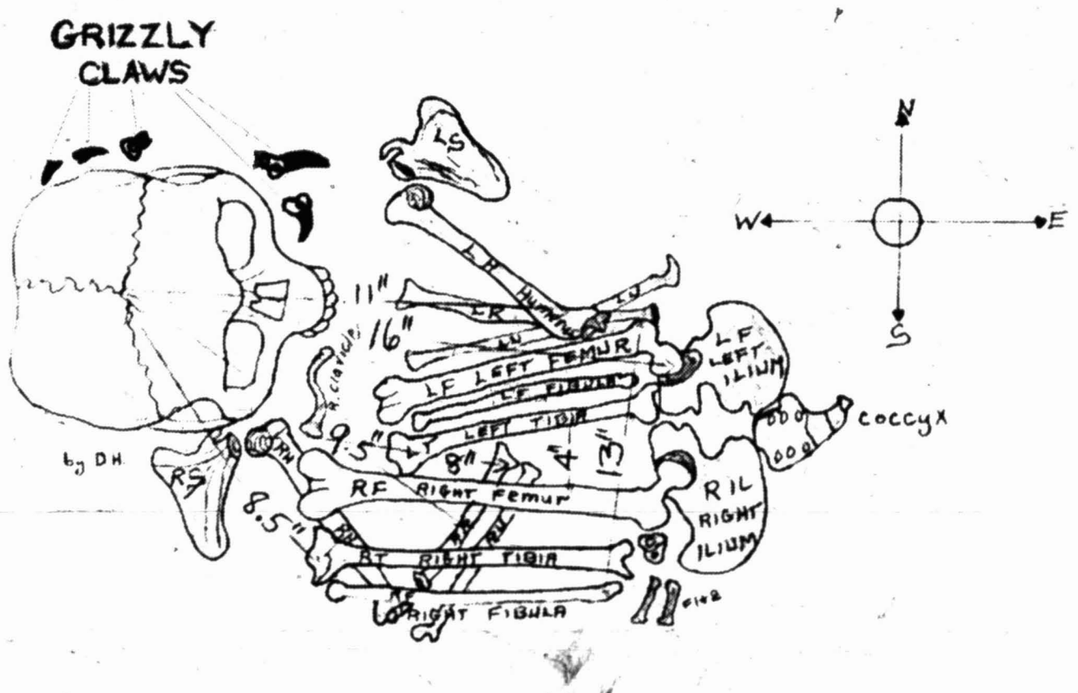
Since three of the five phalanges were pierced for beads of a necklace, it may be assumed that this particular inhumation represents a bear shaman or doctor. The history of bear shamanism is completely unknown among the Rumsen Costanoan of Mission San Carlos, and the discovery of this burial brings forth some interesting conjecture regarding the importance of the California grizzly in the mythology of the Indian. Although the role of the shaman in Costanoan life in unknown, it is an archaeological fact that grizzly bones have been found by the Monterey County Archaeological Society and individuals within midden sites on the Monterey Peninsula and adjacent areas.

The MCAS has discovered these bones at a site on Carmel Bay, sites near Tassajara, and Carmel Valley sites. The paucity of grizzly bones seems to indicate that this great beast was not hunted primarily for food, but for its pelt, claws, and perhaps only hunted by those people within a tribelet who were destined to become a bear shaman. The species identified from midden sites in this area are attributed to Ursus horribilis, although a larger more powerful beast occupied the southern portion of California and was known as Ursus magister.

From past accounts it is evident that the grizzly was extremely common to this area, even feeding on dead whales beached on our local shores. During the Spanish and Mexican periods in Monterey the bear was widely pursued for the bear and bull fights, and in the 1880's when the bear population dwindled, bear traps were constructed of logs and placed in areas like Seneca and Michael's Canyons. Here the Escobar family constructed these log traps and baited them with deer carcasses to attract the maurading bears. It has been said that the last grizzly was killed by one of the Post family as late at 1907 in the Ventana wilderness area, and now the great animal which is the symbol of our state is extinct.

Although bear shamanism in this area is not understood, other tribal groups in California have been studied. In Northern California there were two classes of shamans who used the bear to their symbolic advantage: the shaman who sings, dances and smokes in order to diagnose or the clairvoyant, and the one who possessed the executive power of sucking out diseases by using the power invested within him by the spirit of the grizzly. It would seem that the sucking shaman was rated with the most power, but the singing and dancing shaman had the diagnostic power against illness. The Wintun, Pomo and Yuki groups operated by means of a bear skin shaman who possessed the power to return to life. He was inspired by fear, yet the people of the tribe seem to have encouraged him in his antics. Basically the shaman was considered a benefactor in that he could destroy certain foes. In fact, among the Wintun the shaman had the power to destroy those whom he disliked, and when dressed in the form of the bear he had the faculty of drowning victims.

ONE PECULARITY was that the Wintun never ate the bear, which appears not to have been the case with the Carmel Indians. The Yuki bear shamans received power from bears by dreaming of their ferocity and tenacity. When the young potential shaman had this dream, the elders of the tribe would take him into the woods to live with the bear in its natural habitat. He would emulate by growling, scratching, and when bodily hair began to grow he was given a final initiation by placing him on a log and throwing him into the air. If he retained his hold, he was a complete bear doctor.



RUMSEN INDIAN burial was found about four miles south of Point Lobos. The cadaver was buried lying on its back in a tightly flexed condition. Notice the five remaining grizzly claws around the left side of the face which were apparently part of a claw necklace. This is the first recorded evidence that bear artifacts were used in Monterey County. Grizzly claws are now on exhibit at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History.

In the Pomo version, the doctor was completely encased in a bearskin and his body wrapped with belts of beads serving as armor, and with a horn dagger concelaed on him, this nefarious being roamed the hills in search of his human prey. His philosophy differed from the Yuki in that the doctor was not a person who possessed the bear as his guardian spirit, but one who owned his skin suit, and learned to use it from a human instructor. He was the possessor of a fetish that increased his strength and endurance.

There is the possibility that Coastanoan bear shamanism was largely influenced by the Yokuts who possessed the greater area of what is now the San Joaquin Valley. It is known that annual visits were made to the coast to trade for abalone shells, and certainly a shamanistic diffusion could have occurred. In the Yokut heirarchy the bear shaman could not cure disease, and among the Chukchansi Yokut they had female shamans who, being killed and buried, emerged from the ground in the shape of a bear and could walk off unmolested.

Among the Yaudanchi Yokut the shaman held public dances over patients. Two or three of the participants were painted entirely black and would wear eagle talon necklaces, although there is not ethnographic proof they wore grizzly claws.

In the northern tribes the Yurok shaman owned guardian spirits and operated through communications with the bear, and among the Shasta the victim of a grizzly attack would address the bear spirit, and the shaman would extract the bear's tongue from the wound. Among the Salinan in Monterey County there is a vague reference that the shaman could turn into a grizzly at will, and to the far south in Diegueno country the bear doctors could turn into eagles.

In the Carmel area it would seem logical that the bear would be a fetish of esteem because of the great strength and agility the creature possesses,and because of the flimsy condition of the Indian's bow and arrow the bear would only be taken for ceremonial purposes, or in cases of famine.

Although bear shamanism is now an extinct rite in Monterey County, it is quite exciting to speculate upon the logic the Indian used to place himself in the world of the bear.

AT HOME

Kangaroo mamas have one advantage over "human" mamas—their crib is "built-in." There's no need for them to dash around the house to give Junior tender loving care. He is always nearby, located quite conveniently for mother's attention.

Any mother's attention is crucial in providing a child with the religious foundations needed to produce a responsible adult. Enough freedom so that he can be independent — enough discipline to provide structure for his life. And moral precepts instilled by the Church and parental example.

One day Junior will outgrow mama's pouch or crib. Then, and only then, can parents know if they have been successful.

Monterey Peninsula Landmark

Much written about in architectural magazines and always a favorite on the house and garden tours, we invite you to have your own private tour of one of the most interesting and unusual homes you will ever see. Literally handmade by Mexican craftsmen, about fifty years ago, it is rustic, earthy, handhewn and majestically beautiful. The 59 foot long living room has high cathedral ceiling with peeled pine supports and rafters laced with rawhide; a walk-in fireplace made of granite boulders, and looking down into this lovely room is a loft study. The 40 foot long dining room has the same cathedral ceiling with peeled rafters and a charming Mexican style fireplace. There are four bedrooms each with bath, and a little extra room and bath beside the kitchen. It is conveniently located in the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, and sits on 1½ acres of ancient trees and native growth, all encompassed within a handmade adobe wall. A building site of ½ acre, could be sold off. It's a collector's item to be sure. $117,500.

Lines from Lois

Now is the wondrous time here, and -- garlanded with wildflowers -- GREEN is the color of my true love's hair. (My "true love" being, as all good readers of these Lines know, the beautiful, unmatched Carmel area.)

It's Spring out in the Valley

Everything makes it worthwhile to VISIT OUR CASA ASOLEADA at any time of year -- setting, the privacy of its special world, the beautiful pool, the decorator's dream home -- but right now, the breathtaking beauty of the succulents lining the driveway and spilling down the hillside makes your visit a real "spectacular." At $135,000, we challenge you to match this mid-Valley property ... BUT SUPPOSE YOU REALLY ONLY WANT TO PAY AROUND $75,000, but you still want to lift up your eyes to the hills, the glorious springtime hills, from all your windows, and you prefer to be farther out and near Carmel Valley Village -- well, we just happen to have THAT world for you, too.

AND SUPPOSE PRICE IS NO OBJECT and you want a palatial hilltop retreat for yourself and your family and friends, we can give you a choice. Choose an informal, 40 acre spread, surrounded by hundreds of other acres of riding trails and an unspoiled environment for $350,000. IF FIVE ACRES AND A GEORGIAN OF GREAT BEAUTY, CHARM AND ELEGANCE more nearly suits your life-style, then may we show you a residence sans equal in this area, priced at $375,000. Both have pools overlooking the grand views -- and both will appeal to those with taste as well as means and the desire to get away from it all.

It's Spring by the Sea

And we can show you exciting possibilities in ocean-oriented life-styles from A TOWN HOUSE ON CARMEL'S SCENIC DRIVE at $210,000 to an ELEGANT TWO-LEVEL CONTEMPORARY NEAR CYPRESS PT. course on the 17 Mile Drive for $290,000 -- speaking relatively close in -- or BIXBY LANDING, one of the most historic properties on the Sur Coast at $248,000; or THE AERIE OF TWO WORLD-RENOWNED ARTISTS in the Coastlands near Nepenthe; or THE MOST FABULOUS HOME ON SPINDRIFT LANE. In building sites, an UNMATCHED POINT OF LAND in its own fjiord just 5 miles from Carmel for $145,000, a couple of parcels left in OTTER COVE, or farther down the Coast, spectacular GREY ROCK, perhaps the most fascinating 70 acre building site in the world. (You'll need the special help of our Coast Department for these specialized sites.)

And it's Spring in the Forests of Carmel Highlands and Del Monte

NEAR THE HIGHLANDS INN, we are fortunate to offer two traditional properties -- one formal, one informal, both with splendid ocean and forest views, at $125,000 and $135,000. We even have a little sunshine shack on the side of the mountain overlooking all the Highlands beauties for just $35,000... if the owner's in the mood to be pried loose. Building sites we have, from $16,750 on up.

OUT IN THE DEL MONTE FOREST, two interesting Pebble Beach homes are our pleasure to show you now. ON RONDA ROAD, at just $79,500, we have a very secluded and charming home with the delights of the forest, the Lodge and golf nearby, yet with a hidden away from the world feeling. And ON CORTEZ, we are privileged to present to you one of the finest Doctor's residences in the area for $115,000 -- a new listing we love to show.

It's Spring in Carmel, too

ON CARMEL POINT -- that priceless location for confirmed beach walkers and those who just like to stroll around through lovely gardens and interesting homes -- have you seen GEN. "VINEGAR JOE" STILWELL'S LOVELY OLD MANSION yet? At $148,000 (with an extra lot), it's a real find. And for a NEARLY NEW MANSION, our new listing on Isabella for $125,000 can't possibly be reproduced at the price.

RIGHT IN DOWNTOWN CARMEL, we have one of the most delightfully sophisticated little retreats a couple of blocks from the post office for $69,500, A TOWN HOUSE ON SAN ANTONIO FOR $75,000, and a wonderful family-size home practically on the beach for $135,000. (Speaking of family homes, we also have the world famous Beardsley family residence. With most of its chicks grown and flown, it's ready for another big happy family, or for more than one to share.)

AND HERE'S A SHOPPING TIP: Have you visited the intriguing new patchwork shop, Blue Grass, on Mission across from the Bank of America? A wonderful springtime experience!
